

FEDERAL RESERVE MAY DEPOSIT GOLD ABROAD

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright, 1929, by Post Pub. Co.

Washington—(AP)—Published reports that the Federal Reserve board plans to put on deposit in Europe a sufficient amount of gold to make unnecessary gold shipments from New York are wholly within the realm of general discussion and there are no indications as yet that such a plan can be carried out, if indeed it is legal to do so.

For several weeks the gold movement from the United States to Europe has been puzzling and has received considerable attention here. In the last week the movement has been slowed up and there has been a drop in the discount rates of European central banks. This has diminished the value of foreign currencies on this side of the Atlantic and for the European purchaser of American products it has acted exactly as if there were a rise in prices.

Coming at a time when the government here is striving in all possible ways to stimulate export trade in order to keep American factories going and offset some of the effects of the business depression. It is natural that ways and means of stabilizing the value of foreign currencies should be surveyed.

PLAN WOULD HAVE FOES

Any plan, however, that involves the ear-marking of American gold in foreign countries is likely to come in for severe criticism judging from the attacks which were made on the Federal Reserve board about three years ago, when conferences were held between the directing heads of European central banks and the Federal Reserve bank of New York. Some of the members of congress have never gotten it out of their heads, even at this date, that one of the early causes of the credit difficulties of the United States might be traced to the generous use of gold credit by the Federal Reserve system when European currencies were being stabilized and a return to the gold standard was being arranged abroad.

There is always a conflict between those who wish to use credit conserved for domestic uses and those who feel that America has outgrown

SUSPECT HELD IN OHIO ADMITS HE SHOT MAN

Kenosha—(AP)—Detectives left here today for Loraine, Ohio, to bring back Nick Cosentino, said to have confessed to Ohio authorities that he shot and killed Frank Papara, 32, in an argument over a card game here in 1928. He was waived extradition.

According to his confession to Police Chief Theodore Walker of Loraine, Cosentino, with Papara and Sam Casciario, all of Racine, Wis., came here on Feb. 29, 1928, and went to a speakeasy where they drank and gambled. During the card game, the confession said, an argument started between Cosentino and Papara. Casciario interfered and attempted to settle the differences and Papara threatened him dangerously with a knife. Then, Cosentino said, he drew a gun and shot Papara three times. He escaped and nothing was heard of him until his arrest yesterday.

Casciario was discovered the day after the shooting in a Racine hospital and was later acquitted on charges of being an accessory to the slaying.

STRIKING BARBERS REACH COMPROMISE

Madison—(AP)—Journeymen barbers who went on strike 10 days ago were back at work today after effecting a compromise agreement with their employers.

The barbers walked out when their employers refused demands for a minimum wage of $25 per week and 79 per cent of all receipts over $40 per week.

The barbers now will get a $25 a week guarantee and those who make 79 per cent of the receipts over $40 before the strike will continue to receive as much.

Executive boards of the Master Barbers' association and the National Barbers' union will meet later for further arbitration. It was announced. The agreement stipulated that all master barbers must reemploy the journeymen who went on strike.

The journeymen considered themselves victims in the fight inasmuch as they had not received a guarantee previously.

PARLEY NOW MUST SPEAK IN FIGURES

Delegates Soon to Be Forced to Reach Mathematical Calculations

London—(AP)—After two weeks of cautious exploration through a thicket of generalities the five power naval conference stood today in the presence of its first challenge of concrete reality.

The time has come, those intimately associated with the parley held, when someone soon must begin to talk in figures. What Col. Henry L. Stimson, American delegation head, has called "clearing away the underbrush" is about complete.

The delegations have about talked themselves out in lofty phrase and idealistic appeal, these observers commented and now the ax is to be laid in earnest to cutting away and limiting the growth of sea armaments.

It is true the conference is not yet ready to hear proposals as to how many ships can be scrapped or as to how many must be built. Probably none but the principal delegates were concerning themselves at all with such advanced statistics as they took a weekend or respite today and left conference activities virtually at a standstill.

They may not even reach for some time the question or algebraic ratios as between greater and lesser navies. But they understand fully that they cannot much longer delay coming down to cases on some of the more remote but less definite mathematical calculations involved inevitably in their labors.

MAY START TUESDAY

Some one or more concrete proposals may emerge into light when the conference, sitting as a committee of the whole, assemblies again Tuesday. They were not even touched upon at yesterday's meeting at which the only real business transacted was a tacit agreement that

MAKE BOOZE DRINKER CRIMINAL, IS DEMAND OF WET CONGRESSMAN

Washington—(AP)—A demand that the drinker of alcoholic beverages be classed as a criminal and that prohibition enforcement agencies be directed against such persons was made in the house today by Representative Lehbach, Republican, New Jersey, who is a member of the wet group in congress.

He said it is those who drink that are "really the ones who disregard and defy the dry law; that the still operator, the rum runner, and the bootlegger were merely abettors of the violator" and the drinker was the real breaker and the criminal.

Lehbach, a warm friend of Representative Fort, Republican, New Jersey, a dry, who yesterday declared in the house that drinking of home brew was not unlawful under dry laws, took issue with his colleague.

Rebels Yield To British Rather Than To Ibn Saud

Mecca, Arabia—(AP)—Once more Ibn Saud, king of the Hedjaz and suzerain of the Nejd, has demonstrated that he is boss of the Holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

Behind the brief announcement at Basra that two rebellious sheikhs had sought British intervention rather than fall into Ibn Saud's hands lies the disappearance from the deserts of Arabia of the last of the great pillaging sheikhs, modern counterparts of the medieval robber barons, who have flourished since the great war.

Faisal-Eldowish was the paramount sheik of the Mutair tribe. He was the fiercest and most truculent chieftain of Arabia, a fanatically devout orthodox Moslem who led his Wahabi tribes, who rejected the Muhammadan religion, against the British. He personally was credited with killing more than 100 men. At one time he was Ibn Saud's chief lieutenant.

His zeal became embarrassing to British-supported Wahabi king when

Farmer Is Killed In Gravel Pit

Forest Junction—John Schmidt, 40, prominent farmer of the town of Woodville, was killed shortly before 3 o'clock Friday afternoon by falling gravel in a pit on the Fred Haise farm in the town of Brillion. With his brother, he had gone to the place for a load of gravel.

Backing into the hollow where teams had been loading, he was preparing to fill his sled, when an overhanging ledge suddenly collapsed. About 25 loads of material, it is estimated, slid down, partially burying Mr. Schmidt, who was standing on one side near the rear of the sled. His brother, and the owner of the pit, standing on the opposite side, were able to dodge the falling mass. A physician from here was called while the victim was being extricated, but life was already extinct when medical help arrived. While the victim was not deeply imbedded, the frozen clumps had inflicted fatal wounds on the head and chest.

Blame Warm Weather

The gravel pit where the accident occurred, located four miles northeast of Forest Junction, is the place where the town of Brillion and Calumet-co highway departments operate stonecrushers during the road building season. The ledge which caused the accident is said to have been about four or five feet thick and projecting about three feet. Located on a sheltered southern exposure, it is believed that the warm sunshine Friday afternoon penetrated the frost, causing the mass to loosen.

The body was removed to an undertaking establishment at Kaukauna late Friday afternoon. Mr. Schmidt is survived by his widow and six children.

Nomination Papers A re Placed in Circulation This Week

Mayor A. C. Rule announced Saturday morning, on his return from Chicago, where he was elected president of the Mallot Grocery company, that he would be a candidate for reelection next spring. Nomination papers for Mayor Rule were circulated by friends during his absence.

Mr. Rule, who has served two terms as mayor of Appleton, also is one of the seven candidates for the post-mastership here.

No other announcements of candidacy for mayor have been made, although there are persistent rumors to the effect that two or three persons are contemplating throwing their hats in the ring.

REPRESENTATIVES TO BE INFORMED ON WOLF DAMS

Washington—(AP)—Wisconsin representatives in congress today had assurance that they will be promptly informed just what the federal Indian bureau plans to do in connection with the proposal of the Wisconsin Power and Light company to build five dams on the Wolf river in the Menominee Indian reservation.

Assistant Commissioner Scattergood promised Senator La Follette at a hearing yesterday that he will report just the bureau's intentions before any deal is completed.

In earlier questioning, Scattergood had said that "if another plan is proposed, involving abandonment of the power plant, it will involve considerable loss in revenue to the Indians which should be provided for in some other way."

IN NO HURRY TO APPOINT HIS DEPUTIES

Giese Congratulates His Successor as He Takes Oath of Office

Taking his oath of office before John E. Hantsch, county clerk, at 10:30 this morning, John Lappen, 605 N. Morrison-st., assumed his duties as sheriff of Outagamie county, succeeding Fredrick W. Giese, who was ousted Friday by Governor Walter J. Kohler.

Mr. Giese was present in the county clerk's office when the new sheriff entered the office and he was the first to congratulate Mr. Lappen. Mr. Giese offered to help Mr. Lappen assume his new duties and the two men arranged a conference for early Saturday afternoon at which time Mr. Giese was to turn over all his records.

GETS KEMP'S STAR

Sheriff Lappen's first official act on entering the sheriff's office was to accept the star of Luther Kemp, undersheriff, a position he held about an hour. Mr. Kemp served as a deputy sheriff under Giese since the latter took office in January, 1929. Last fall Ernest Conrad resigned as undersheriff and Mr. Giese appointed his wife. Late Friday afternoon, when Mr. Giese learned of the governor's action, Mrs. Giese resigned from the office and Kemp was appointed to take her place. He held the office until Giese received official notice from Governor Kohler of his dismissal.

District Attorney Stanley A. Staid, who pressed the ouster charges against Ex-Sheriff Giese, said Saturday morning that Giese ceased to be sheriff as soon as he had received word of his ouster and that this notice automatically cancelled his appointment of an undersheriff and deputy sheriffs.

All deputies who served under Sheriff Giese were asked in a statement which he issued Saturday morning to turn in their stars to the new sheriff just as soon as it is convenient so that Mr. Lappen can make his own appointments.

"I expect to be very careful in my selection of officers who will assist me," Mr. Lappen said.

Madison—(AP)—Appointment of Emanuel D. Newman, Kenosha, as the Wisconsin Board of Examiners in Optometry and re-appointment of Dr. C. A. Harper, Madison, as member of the state board of health was announced today by Gov. Walter Kohler.

Dr. Harper, dean of all state health officers in the United States, has served on the board of health for 25 years, having been appointed by Governor La Follette and reappointed by Gov. James Davidson, Emanuel Philipp, and James J. Blaine.

In 1904 he was selected by the board as its executive officer and has served in this capacity for 25 years. Dr. Harper graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1879 and is a member of the county, state and American Medical associations.

La Crosse—(AP)—Excitement over a game of curling was blamed for the death of William A. Pryor, 63, winter resident, who died as he walked from the rink here after playing a brilliant play last night. He was prominent in curling circles and the death of Pryor caused a great deal of excitement here.

Pryor came here from Canada in 1875 and founded a curling club. He was an excellent curler and was a member of the La Crosse Curling Club. DISPLAY KNIFE USED IN TEXAS STABBING

Austin, Texas—(AP)—The knife which Miss Leitia Highsmith, 25-year-old stenographer and intimate of John W. Brady, 59, was stabbed to death last Nov. 9, was displayed in court today as the state contended its attack upon Brady's defense plea of insanity.

It was a long knife. With it the state alleges Brady, former Texas judge, stabbed Miss Highsmith several times, one or more of the wounds causing her death, after he had been ejected from a party at her apartment house.

"Squawker" Is Murdered By Gangsters In Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—The gangster's revenge upon the "squawker" was meted out today to Julius Rosenberg, 45, ex-gambler and tipster.

Two assassins stepped from their automobile on a street corner today, called to Rosenberg, and drawing sawed-off shotguns sent six bullets into his head and body.

Six weeks ago Rosenberg walked into the state's attorney's office. He was on the "in" of vice and gambling in Chicago, he said. He offered to tell what he knew.

The state's attorney's listened, but were skeptical. They ordered him to go out and bring in some of the principals. Rosenberg never came back.

Police said his death today was the penalty for his "double-crossing" of underworld foes and his undercover work as tipster for the Chicago crime commission and police raids on gambling houses.

Through his work as undercover agent Rosenberg had gained a wide acquaintance with the shady side of Chicago and was reputed to be one of the best informed men on the "Who's Who" of the racketeering, gaming, beer-hauling world. For a time he gathered information for Frank J. Lesch, when the latter was a special prosecutor.

He had left his home only a few minutes before he was shot down. At the corner of Railroad and McLean-sts a dark blue touring car, side curtains concealing its occupants, drew up beside him. Two men emerged while a third sat at the wheel. There was a hail of gunfire. Rosenberg fell, and before the handful of pedestrians nearby had realized what had occurred the executioners were speeding away.

Rosenberg was reputed to be a mysterious informant who refused at the last moment to testify. In the recent trial of James "Highpockets" O'Brien in the slot machine conspiracy case, O'Brien was acquitted late in the trial the prosecutor announced whose name was not then known. Defense attorneys immediately protested the introduction of a "dark horse" and the summoning of witnesses without notification to the defense. The state, however, failed to produce the mysterious witness who is now understood to have been Rosenberg.

Jack McGuire, reputed machine-gunner of the "Al" Capone staff and once accused of the St. Valentine's day murders of last year, was arrested with Tony Accardo and taken to detective headquarters to be questioned concerning the Rosenberg shooting.

Beaumont, Texas—(AP)—Fourteen members of the crew of the tugboat Edgar F. Coney today were believed at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico with their boat. The report from the Liebre said the crew of a large tug was towing at the time of the disaster had been rescued. The Liebre was expected to dock here today.

3-YEAR TERM, $2,000 FINE

Former Milwaukee Prohibition Officers Sentenced for Taking Bribes

Milwaukee—(AP)—Don Finke and Henry Strawn, former federal prohibition agents here each were sentenced to three years in federal prison and fined $2,000 by Federal Judge P. A. Gosior today. They were found guilty by different juries of accepting bribes in protection of bootleggers.

Four of the five counts against Finke charged him with accepting $100 a month from Joe Pessin for protection of a large still in Oconomowoc. He was acquitted on these counts, but convicted on the fifth, charging acceptance of $100 from Pessin, acting as agent, for permitting an alleged $1000 load of alcohol to be carried away from a West Allis garage.

TOOK "JACKPOT"

Strawn was indicted on three counts and found guilty on two of them. He was acquitted on a charge that he accepted $100 from George Dolchewsky of Green Bay, to kill a case that had been brought against a relative. He was found guilty of taking $500 from Frank Parent to kill a case against him and of taking $1,000 set up as a "jackpot" by David Ray bootleggers to have several arrests dropped.

Strawn declined in court that in accepting the money he had only been acting as messenger and friend of his roommate, Finke. Finke gave him $500 of the jackpot, he admitted.

Finke, third in command at the local prohibition office, under Chief W. Frank Cunningham, was transferred to the St. Paul office following his indictment, and unfavorably mentioned was made in the U. S. senate report of his reinstatement.

PRISON NOT NAMED

Judge Geisler did not name the prison in which Strawn and Finke are to serve, but court attaches said it would be Leavenworth, Kas. A stay of execution of sentence was allowed until Thursday.

Finke told newspapermen he felt he was "taking a risk for something he didn't do." He swore that he had no money with which to pay the fine, citing the fact that he had assumed a job as a filing station attendant just after he resigned from the federal service. As St. Paul, Strawn's attorney likewise claimed that Strawn "hasn't a cent."

Each also faces another indictment if the federal district attorney decides to press them, at the time they are released.

Strawn was the government's chief witness in the closing of the St. Charles hotel here in 1928. He recently confided that his expense account for living at the hotel and staving several parties, where with champagne and liquor, amounted to nearly $1000. Three were sent to jail when the place was closed.

900 Chickens Destroyed In $5,000 Fire Near City

NO WATER ON PROPERTY TO HELP FIREMEN

City Crews Refuse to Make Run Because They Could Not Help

A loss of $5,000 was suffered at the Hauert Chicken farm, route 4, Appleton, about 2 o'clock this morning when fire of unknown origin destroyed a large chicken coop and 900 chickens. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

A request for help from the Appleton fire department was refused by the firemen acting under a recent general order from Fire Chief George P. McGilgan that the department should not make runs to fires outside of Appleton.

A large number of neighbors answered the call to the Hauert farm and by shoveling snow and pumping water from a well they succeeded in saving a nearby granary from destruction. The chicken coop, however, where the blaze started was totally destroyed along with all the chickens it housed. The building was a frame structure about 110 feet wide and nearly 150 feet long.

CLAIM HIGH LAKES CAUSING DAMAGE

Chicago Bill of Exceptions Says Water Much Higher Than in 1927

Chicago (AP)—The Great Lakes states which protest diversion of lake water through the Chicago river now face extensive damage from high lake levels, the sanitary district of Chicago contends in a bill of exceptions to the federal Monday in the Supreme court of the United States.

The bill contains 13 exceptions and objections to the report of Charles Evans Hughes, special master, who heard the lake diversion suit, and emphasizes the present high lake levels as one of the principal reasons why the sanitary district should be allowed to divert water for its sewage disposal operations.

Mr. Hughes, the bill says, failed to consider the fact that since the filing of the original report in November, 1927, the levels of Lake Michigan, Lake Huron, Lake Erie and Lake Ontario have risen approximately three feet, nine inches, causing damage to riparian interests, docks, wharves, piers and similar structures and that such damage will be even greater if the diversion is halted.

The bill also objects to the special master's findings because he did not allow sufficient time for constructing the sewage disposal plant provided for, and also because the 1,600 cubic feet per second of diversion he allowed is not enough. The bill says at least 2,900 cubic feet per second is required.

RAIN, WARMER WEATHER PREDICTED FOR SUNDAY

Rain or snow with warmer weather is the weather predicted for this weekend. It is expected that within the next 24 hours the mercury will rise to 20 and 25 degrees above zero. Rain will fall in the extreme south portion of the state, and snow is expected to prevail in the central and northern sections.

Similar predictions have been circulated throughout the midwest for the next 24 hours. Temperatures were recorded as high as 20 degrees above zero in the southern part of the state Saturday morning. Winds are shifting in the south and southeast which is a good indication that wet weather is coming.

At 6 o'clock Saturday morning the thermometer registered 9 degrees above zero, while at noon it registered 17 degrees above zero.

FAVOR EXEMPTION OF MONEY TRUSTS FROM STATE POWER

Recommendation Is Prepared by Special Committee of Legislature

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Wall Street, New York (CPA)—Against considerable public agitation and some political pressure for regulation of investment trusts and trading corporations which grew out of the great amount of new capital raised in their behalf last year and the subsequent depreciation in their shares, a special committee from the senate of bankers appointed by Governor Roosevelt has just recommended that the investment trusts continue to be exempt from supervision by the state banking department.

Consequently, there probably will be no regulatory legislation of the "trusts" in Albany this winter. It is felt that such evils as have been developed in the financing and management of the "trusts" can be corrected by those who exercise a banking authority over them rather than through legislative acts.

In 1923, following a period of flotation of none too good "trust" shares, which resulted in heavy losses to investors in them, there was a strong urge for supervision by the department of banking in New York state.

PROPOSED SURVEY

The attorney general prepared an elaborate survey of the situation and an act to amend the banking law "in relation to the incorporation and regulation of investment trusts" was recommended. This, however, died in committee. One of the difficulties was in obtaining a proper definition of an "investment trust" which would not include institutions or corporations that properly should be outside of the scope of the proposed act. The act submitted to the New York state legislature provided "that any fund or company doing business, or offering its securities in the state of New York or ostensibly as an 'investment trust' would have either to incorporate such under a new investment trust section of the banking laws or receive a license to operate as an 'investment trust' from the state superintendent of banks."

AGAINST CHAIN BANKS

Another significant position taken by the bankers' commission in New York had to do with chain banks and branch banking. In this the commission assumed a positive attitude where it had exhibited a negative policy toward the investment trusts. For it recommended that chain banking be prohibited and that branch banking should be confined to limited areas. However, the commission felt that no legislation on either movement should be inaugurated in New York state until congress had made its report of the subject. The legislative committee made no recommendation on chain banking.

The momentum gained by the chain banking movement last summer carried over into the autumn and was practically checked by the panic in stocks in November and has never been revived. Corporations formed to hold the stocks of individual banks and issuing their own stocks to the public suffered as much as any other group of companies in the stock market slump. Recently there has been a renewal of the selling of such stocks, particularly in the north, and a large scale and two great banking groups were formed. The stock of the one, which was offered to the public a year ago at $2.50 and later advanced nearly 100 per cent, has sold within the past few days several points under its original price while the stock of the other chain bank corporation which was issued at $1.50 six months ago and rose 20 points has sold this week as low as $3.9 a share. These two corporations represent about 160 different banking units throughout the northwest and combined assets of approximately $1,000,000,000.

Convict Taunted By Pals Pleads For Hangman's Noose

BY PHIL SIXNOTT
Sacramento, Calif.—Freedom was sweet to Albert M. Stewart of Los Angeles—worth the risk of life itself.—Thanksgiving Day, in 1927, when he joined other convicts in a riot for freedom at Folsom prison.

Life was more desirable than freedom some months later, when Stewart went to trial with five others for killing two guards and 12 convicts. He turned state's evidence in an effort to save his neck; he was sentenced to death with the other five. He appealed and thus obtained a stay of execution.

Now, the mechanism of emotion has swung back again.

Stewart—the other five hanged—wants freedom via the gallows; freedom from the whispers of "Squealer" that found him throughout the prison.

Ever since the trial, Stewart has been scorned by fellow convicts.

Anthony Brown and Roy Stokes were first to die. They went one Friday morning—Brown flicking a cigarette he asked the warden to make it snappy. Stokes, a little owner by the clang of the trap under Brown.

Walter Burke and little James Gregg went the following Friday morning, both nonchalant to the end.

Stewart was paired with Eugene Crosby (Crosby smiling) went alone. He refused religious consolation, as did the four others.

But today was a poet and he left this verse in his cell: Judas Letticed Christ, the Master, me," Sheriff Lappen said Saturday morning. "The qualifications of every man proposed for the office of deputy sheriff will be studied before appointments are made. I hope to come out of office with a record as clean as when I entered and I hope to reflect credit on Governor Kohler's appointment."

Sheriff Lappen said he would not hurry the appointment of his assistants and that he wanted time to look into the records of the men who had been proposed.

U.S. Airplanes Fly Nearly 200 Million Miles In Year

Commercial and military activities carved a new niche for itself in 1929 air transport operations by flying 197,546,590 miles.

The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce announced this figure today in a copyrighted report, and it "established the United States as the leader of world in transport operations." Civilian and commercial flying was more than three times as great as military and governmental activities, planes in the former class covering 149,579,451 miles as compared with 47,967,139 for the latter.

Major air transport lines, operating on regular schedules, flew passengers, mail, and express more than 90,000 miles every 24 hours. Mail volume doubled over 1928 to 7,095,330 pounds, while passenger business tripled with 165,263 persons riding the air lines.

The average passenger rate per mile on established lines was 19.6 cents during the year, a figure since cut to 1.3 cents by radical reductions on most lines.

Estimates based on typical operations in the country indicated that their planes flew 194,335,569 miles and carried 2,995,539 passengers. Private flying increased from 12,000,000 miles in 1928, to 25,000,000 miles.

LEYGUES SEEKS TO STRENGTHEN POWERS OF FRENCH COLONIES

Would Also Establish Naval Bases on Pacific Sea Board

BY MILTON BRONNER
London—As if to snap its fingers at restriction of naval strength, France—with the five-power naval armament conference under way here—would appear to have taken two steps in the opposite direction:

1. It has approved the building of more cruisers and submarines; and
2. Pointedly announced that hereafter naval units will be maintained in French colonies—some of them in parts of the world where now only American and British warships are seen.

Georges Leygues, who is a sort of perpetual Secretary of the Navy surviving the multitudinous changes in French cabinets, the other day made a speech in Paris in which he said the guiding principle of his department was:

"Unity of views; continuity of effort."

TO PROTECT COLONIES

He then went on to say that his department aimed not only at giving France an adequate navy for her home waters in the Mediterranean, Atlantic, but also for her colonial empire.

"There are," he said, "active races and passive races. The foundation of our overseas empire proves that we belong to the former category. One of the most important missions of our navy is to protect the magnificent work accomplished by our predecessors."

He then announced that he was about to form four divisions of the navy to be permanently attached to ports in the Pacific ocean, Indian ocean, the western coast of Africa, and in the West Indies.

Besides, Saigon in Indo-China will remain the French base of operations in the far east. From there cruisers, dispatch boats and gunboats will depart for the seas and rivers of China to protect French interests. This force will be strengthened by at least three big submarines.

INQUIRY IS ORDERED IN GARVIN SHOOTING

Detroit (AP)—Public airing of the circumstances surrounding the mysterious shooting Jan. 2 of Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the police crime and bomb squad, was promised today by Commissioner Harold H. Emmons.

Announcing he would "take the lid off" the case, Commissioner Emmons appointed a three man board of inquiry in the department to try Detective Adolph Van Coppernolle on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer growing out of his alleged revelations of a police plot against Inspector Garvin.

RECTOR MARRIED BY PRIEST SAYS BISHOP CANNOT REMOVE HIM

Dayton, Ky. (AP)—The Rev. Julius A. Velasco, 31, rector of St. John Episcopal church here, suspended by Bishop H. P. Almon Abbott from exercising ministerial functions in the Lexington diocese because he was married at Elliott City, Md., last Saturday by a Catholic priest, said today the bishop has no right to ask him to resign.

Mr. Velasco said he will not resign and will continue to hold services at his church or will take steps to close the church.

"I have committed no offense," he said. "I have done nothing to jeopardize the ministry and have been guilty of no disgrace. The Roman Catholic church has as much right to marry a man as has any other church."

Only the members of my congregation can ask me to resign. If they do so, I must grant their wish. Bishop Abbott cannot suspend me because I have done nothing wrong."

Bishop Abbott announced Mr. Velasco's suspension last night, saying the rector gave him an agreement in black and white three months ago that he would resign if he did anything to jeopardize the church. The clergyman was married last Saturday to Miss Catherine Rogers by Father Michael O'Ryan.

"The Rev. Mr. Velasco does not know what he is talking about when he says I cannot suspend him," Bishop Abbott said today in Lexington. "He will be presented for trial before an ecclesiastical board and it will be a matter of time until he is removed from the ministry."

OUR TENTH ANNIVERSARY
Tomorrow will be the tenth anniversary of the Appleton Post-Crescent. Ten years ago, on Monday, Feb. 2, 1920, Appleton became a one-newspaper city with the consolidation of the Appleton Daily Post and The Evening Crescent. In the first issue of the consolidated paper the purposes and policies of The Post-Crescent were announced editorially as follows:

A newspaper which is a power for good, which is a potent influence in the upbuilding of the community, which defends the public interest and the welfare of the people, is an institution that yields its greatest dividends in the consciousness of duty well performed. The day once when the newspaper was an instrument for the advancement of personal ambitions, when it served special rather than public interests, when it was the tool, or shall we dignify it with the name "organ," of a political party, which generally meant politicians. That day is over. The great power in the publishing world today is the independent, untrammelled, free press. It has little to do with politics, nothing to do with partisanship, and nothing to give to those who seek its assistance to gain office or use elections to help private interests.

The independent newspaper serves no master. It is not controlled by politicians, party pressure or any other self-seeking interest. It bears no party label. Its policies are governed by what it conceives to be for the good of the people, of the community, of the state and nation, without the slightest regard for political organizations or office seekers. It is always free to take any position it desires. It is free to agitate itself if it decides its stand is right and a mistake. Its sole aim and its sole standard is to promote sound public policies and to help make its environment a better place in which to live and do business.

The Post-Crescent proposes to serve Appleton and its surrounding territory in this manner, with these purposes, to the best of its ability. It realizes that it must do this in order to obtain and hold the confidence of the people. It desires to place itself in a position to maintain these standards. What affects Appleton and its people will be of first concern to the Post-Crescent. It is a newspaper for their use and we hope to build it into their confidence and support through merit and service.

How well The Post-Crescent has accomplished this purpose is best illustrated by the vastly increased services it offers its readers, and the proof is in the fact that the circulation of The Post-Crescent today is more than double the combined circulations of its two predecessors before consolidation. There can be no better nor more convincing evidence that The Post-Crescent has merited the confidence and respect of the people than that they are reading it in increasing numbers year after year.

It has been no easy task in these ten years to build up the Post-Crescent to the position it now occupies as one of the outstanding small-city newspapers in the United States. It has required untiring effort, ceaseless planning and loyal cooperation to build a paper which has earned the right to be compared with papers printed in cities very much larger than Appleton. These accomplishments never would have been possible if the limited field here had been divided between two papers.

The history of these ten years is a story of almost phenomenal progress. It is a story of an increase in circulation from 7,200 for the two papers before consolidation to 15,400 in 1929, a circulation that is not equalled by any newspaper printed in a city of equal size in the United States.

This circulation increase was merited by the greatly enlarged news service offered readers of the Post-Crescent. The news of the entire world is placed at their doorstep every evening. It is a long step from the single Morse telegraph wire and the three reporters of 1920 to two high speed trunkline telegraph printers and the 12 reporters, not to mention the host of special correspondents, that now serve the readers of The Post-Crescent. It is another long step from the average of eight pages and 44 columns of news in 1920 to the 1929 average of nearly 22 pages with 99 columns of news every day.

But something more than effort, planning and energy has been required to reach the position The Post-Crescent now occupies. It has been a matter of personnel, of machinery, of equipment, a constant improvement in plant and publishing facilities. The mechanical department of the Post-Crescent is a large factory keyed up to a high pitch of efficiency and which must reach a peak in production every day. The increase in mechanical equipment in ten years is quite unusual. Two newspaper presses were scrapped to keep up with the ever increasing pace, and the third, now only three years old, is almost outgrown. In 1920 four typesetting machines were sufficient "to get out the paper," today ten are necessary to carry the load and it is necessary to operate one or more machines on night shifts. Newspaper machinery seldom heard of in cities of 25,000 has been installed to speed up production, and all of this equipment is driven at top speed.

These ten years of growth and progress are assurance to The Post-Crescent of Appleton's future. Just a few days ago announcement was made of the purchase of a site on which to erect a publishing house adequate to permit expansion of the newspaper to keep pace with the future of Appleton. The purchase of this site is tangible evidence of the Post-Crescent's faith in Appleton and is proof of its intention to continue constant improvement of the newspaper in years to come as it has in the last decade. We believe the people of Appleton and surrounding territory deserve a good newspaper, and the Post-Crescent organization is determined that they shall have that kind of a paper. The constant effort toward improvement is to be continued so we may hold and strengthen the confidence which the Post-Crescent has enjoyed in the last ten years.

STATE ROAD MAINTENANCE

Gov. Kohler wants snow removed from the public highways by the state. He holds that this is a general and not a local responsibility. The next legislature is under obligation to make certain changes in the highway statutes in order to receive federal highway aid. This will necessitate taking administrative control of highway maintenance from counties and placing it in the hands of the state. This is necessary to comply with the demands of the federal bureau of roads, which has extended aid for 1930 on the condition that the law would be changed to meet this requirement. It is of importance to Wisconsin because the federal appropriation coming to it this year will total nearly $2,000,000, and the governor estimates that it may reach $3,000,000 for 1931.

The rapid expansion of hard surfaced roads has developed the fact, which must be apparent to everyone, that state administration of maintenance and in some degree construction is necessary to bring about through roads and a unified system. Snow removal has come to be recognized as much a part of maintenance as repairs and other attention during the months when there is no snow. If the main highways are to be kept open in winter, affording through communication between distant points, it is obvious that it can best be done by state administration. Inaction or neglect of duty by one county would paralyze the entire route. It is for the reason that maintenance cannot be left to county or local initiative that the federal government insists upon state administration as a condition of participation in federal aid.

The widespread construction of good roads has brought with it new problems of administration. Old practices and policies will to a large extent have to be discarded. Undoubtedly the major burdens of highway construction, maintenance and supervision will have to be assumed by the state. Only by this method can a maximum of economy and efficiency be secured, and that is what the taxpayers as a whole must desire.

The Post-Mortem

And They Call Us a Nation of Babbitts

The Russian government has doomed to eternal silence the bells of Moscow's forty times four churches. All this because the workers complained the ringing disturbed their sleep (though we can never be quite sure if a worker in Russia has anything to say about what happens) and because scrapping the bells would furnish the government with metal necessary to its industrialization plan. (The real reason seems to be here, doesn't it?) The bells on other churches in many other Russian cities and towns have already been muffled.

We are a particularly church-going nation, but we prefer church bells to factory whistles. We appreciate, too, that the Soviet has no love for the church. We wonder... will Russia forget how to pray?

There's one problem settled, now we'll turn our attention to the naval conference. Some other time, though.

Our creditors will be trusted to learn that we missed out on a great chance to clean up yesterday noon. Returning from lunch we were confronted with a fine opportunity to sell extras. It was fine, but big business like that requires too much working capital.

Today's Anniversary

SECESSION OF TEXAS

On Feb. 1, 1861, Texas seceded from the Union despite the opposition of Sam Houston, its governor.

Removed from the center of conflict, Texas saw little actual fighting during the Civil War. The Federal forces captured Galveston and held it for three months, but two attempts of the Union forces to enter the state from Louisiana were defeated.

The last battle of the war was fought on the lower Rio Grande, near Palo Alto, a month after Appomattox.

Following the period of reconstruction, a constitution was submitted to the people in 1869, when congressmen and state officers were elected.

On March 30 of the following year Texas was readmitted to the Union.

At the election in November, 1872, the Democrats secured control of the state and have since held it.

PETTING FAVORS GOOD DIGESTION

Forty years ago a physiologist named Wertheimer found that slight pinching of a sensory nerve in an animal under complete anesthesia quickly abolished the rhythmic contractions of the stomach. Such contractions occur regularly during digestion. If the animal were conscious the irritation of the nerve would cause pain.

Fifteen or twenty years ago Cannon, another physiologist, found that the emotional excitement without pain, was sufficient to stop the digestive process in an animal for a considerable time. Cannon demonstrated that these curious effects of emotion were due to variations in the secretion of adrenalin. Professor Cannon's "Bodily Changes in Pain, Hunger, Fear and Rage" published in 1915 by D. Appleton & Company, is a classic that should be in every home library, alongside of Darwin's "Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals," published in 1916 by Appletons. I classify these two books with McKenzie's "Exercise in Education and Medicine," published in 1917 by W. B. Saunders company, as the teacher's triad, and it doesn't matter what the teacher is preparing to teach. There is more education packed in these three books, and they are all devoid of perfect than in any dozen other works I know.

When I contemplate all the hokum, bunk and publisher's moss that takes up good space on my own bookshelves, I thank heaven for Cannon, whose inspiration and encouragement (as the preface writers say) I believe I should never buy another book.

Please do not push and shove, ladies and gentlemen. The line between the petting that helps digestion is not the kind done by boys and housemaids, a the movies nor that demonstrated along boulevards and quiet streets. This public petting rather stops peristalsis, sometimes reverses it and makes on sick, as they say in England.

Emotion unfavorable to normal digestion thus influences favorable to digestion.

You know how dry your lips are just before the chairman or toastmaster assures the audience you need no introduction. Well, the secretion of saliva is only one small part of the digestive process. You know how the odor or even a picture of savory food makes your mouth water when you get ravenously hungry. But do you know how much your digestion is retarded, inhibited or arrested altogether by fear of detection if you've been up to some mischief, by anxiety if you are gambling with your small reserve, by irritation, anger or annoyance at some mean deal from an unfair competitor, or by worry over that little trick you put over on the income tax collector?

It is comical, in a way, that the victim of "nervous dyspepsia" is in many cases "nervous" only about getting his dyspepsia tablet just at the proper time, and his anxiety about that is what keeps his digestion out of kilter. It is a vicious circle, or a case of perpetual emotion. The kind of petting that aids digestion is, for example, scratching the dog behind the ears, stroking the cat's back gently until she purrs, the sprightly conversation of a happy family of congenial friends, at table, the companionship of your first wife if you still keep her, and all that.

The Tinymites

By Hal Cochran

THE crow kept eating seeds until it seemed that he had had his fill. "Oh, my, but they are good," said he. "I'm sorry I must stop. I know I would be a heap of fun to eat up every single one, but then I'd be so full I'm sure that I would simply drop."

"You know, of course, it isn't right to eat and eat with all your might. Take my advice and please do a silly thing like that. Why, I have eaten too much now. I'll have to take a nap somehow. I guess I'll snooze upon this flower. It's something like a mat."

Then, as the crow flopped down to sleep it said, "I wish that you would keep close watch on me and wake when an hour or so has passed. Then I'll get up and feel all right and promptly fly right out of sight. It doesn't take me long to go 'cause I can fly real fast."

An hour passed by. Then Clowry said, "Wake up! Wake up! You sleepy head. We've guarded you for, oh, so long and you are safe and sound. Now, will you do a favor or please? It's something you can do with ease. Just help us find a way that we can get down to the ground."

"Well, let me see," the bird replied. "I guess that you all want a ride. Say, I am hardly big enough to take you on my back. I might start off, but when I fear you'd wish that you were all back here. Your weight would surely make me drop and we would land kersmack."

"Aw, shucks," said Clowry, "You're afraid." A sudden jerk the big crow made and grabbed poor Clowry in his bill. "It shouted, 'You will find that you can't ridicule a crow. I have you now, and off we go!' It took poor Clowry into the air and left the rest behind."

(The Tinymites take after the crow in the next story.)

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Back in 1912 before the word "racketeer" had been coined by the underworld, the Italian populace of New York lived in mortal dread of the Black Hand.

Vendettas of their native mountains had been carried over to the new world and commercialized into a violent system of blackmail, extortion, kidnapping and murder.

By 1915 there was an epidemic of bomb explosions. Finally a detective happened to see a furtive figure late one night plant a bomb in the doorway of a garage and spaghetti grocery. A companion seized the bomb and tore out the fuse while he grabbed the fleeing bomber.

The latter turned out to be a Sicilian grocer of considerable respectability, named Petrone. Through him the police were able to round up the ring of terrorists.

The "kick" was a wider scale of the old Camorra, and Mafia gangs, of which the former's Brooklyn branch used to burn the bodies of victims in bakery ovens instead of leaving them out in the street to be given gaudy funerals.

These and other practices are re-described in the memoirs of Fiaschetti, as told to Prosper Brunelli, a former newspaper man, in the book "You Gotta Be Tough."

Fiaschetti's narrative throws an unofficial light on some of the town's official crimes. He was one of those assigned to the Dot King case, in which he says somebody defeated justice by throwing "a big monkey wrench" after the murder of the Broadway butterfly.

GUARDED TIPSTERS
Do you wonder how the police learn about murder contracts and are able to say, without legal evidence, what gang took a late lord of the underworld for a ride?

They nearly always learn from the stool-pigeons, says Fiaschetti, in exchange for kindness or more often freedom.

The same system he found employed in Italy to which he went to locate a fugitive and to search for the slayers of his former chief, Petrusino.

Petrusino had gone to Sicily to look up the criminal records of some 2,000 Italians in the American branches of Camorra and the Mafia, with a view to having them deported.

A Neapolitan prince saw him shot down in front of his palace and recognized the gunman, one Schifano, who hawked around the city the blood of slaughtered animals. The prince had been afraid to talk, but under the promise of secrecy he told what he knew of Fiaschetti.

Detective Mike then disguised himself behind a beard and obtained access to the meetings of the Mafia, where he learned that Schifano had fled to America. And he adds that the blood seller is still at large in this enormous country.

BARBS

A writer on musical subjects says the jazz music heard in the night clubs takes the edge off the diners' appetite. The prices help a trifle, too.

The naval conference Keynote probably would have sounded better to some of those attending if it had been pitched in a minor instead of a major scale.

The bank in a small town in Kansas closed its doors the other day. Three suspicious strangers were in town looking for work, according to an item in the local paper.

Science has given us an unbreakable phonograph record. But you can always sail it out the back window at the neighbor's cat.

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—John Robinson's book of synonyms must have been pretty well thumbed after he had finished the composition of his rarefied speech to the house of representatives prior to moving over to the senate.

For he had compliments for everybody—those now members of the house and those who have sat there for the last 11 years.

And the Kentuckian is no miser of praise. In his own song he put on an apt and thick.

He opened with Jack Garner. And his words descriptive of the fiery, honest, earnest, active and splendid. Of Cordell Hull he said that the Tennessee "could do as good a job as president as any democrat in the country."

Finnis Garrett "would adorn any lawmaking body in the country," Champ Clark was a "great American," and Claude Kitchin, the democratic leader of the house, was "one of the cleverest and best debaters I ever heard."

WORLD BEATERS
The late Uncle Joe Cannon was a "fine old Republican statesman and patriot." James R. Mann was "the greatest of all parliamentarians."

Martin Madden and James W. Good were men of "great distinction." Major Steadman, the only Confederate veteran in the house, he described as "gallant... a man who has enriched my whole life."

And Speaker Nick Longworth—he gave special attention to him—is "a capable parliamentarian, ripened statesman, courteous, all-round good fellow, our own Nick."

Nor did he forget the ladies of the house. He was loud in his tribute to the seven gentlewomen. They were "splendid, honest and efficient." But that is not all. Turning to the house, he cried:

"I am not a prophet, or the son of a prophet, but you young men of the house, if you continue in the service, need not be surprised to arise some day and address the chairman as Madam Speaker."

Those who did not single out for praise nevertheless got their share. For before he was through, he surveyed the entire membership, and in a voice loud and strong told them that:

"There is no group of men and women... in the world... who possesses more ability, more real courage, more sincerity, a higher sense of honor, a loftier patriotism."

His regret at leaving the house was softened only because in the senate he would be associated with so many former representatives. There he would find one of his old professors, Senator Fess of Ohio, and he would renew acquaintance with an old schoolmate—the fine Senator Hatfield.

And there, too, he would find his old friends and associates of the house. Senators Patterson, Connally, Barkley, Hayden, Schall, Caraway, Greene, Hawes, McCulloch, Stephens, Tydings and Gillet.

Ten Years Ago Today

AND that is how we looked ten years ago today when the first issue of the Post-Crescent came off the press. It marked our initial effort after bringing together the thirty seven year old Daily Post and the thirty year old Evening Crescent. We were proud of it. Yet, examine it, notice the front page make-up, the style of type, the number of columns. Compare it with today's front page, note that it had not yet gone over to the banner headline — the World War's contribution to standard newspaper make-up.

One member of the Post-Crescent organization, with the paper from the start, looked at this first issue the other day. His thoughts carried him back ten years. He placed the issues of today and yesterday side by side.

"Looks pretty weak, doesn't it?" he commented, indicating the first issue, though the Post-Crescent ranked favorably with other newspapers even then.

Here is an incident typical of the spirit behind the Post-Crescent. Away with the archaic, the old-fashioned — this is a swift moving world and we must keep up with it. Witness, in ten years, the remarkable improvements and growth in the newspaper. An almost complete change and an immense increase of equipment, a more than doubling of news content, of man power, have occurred. We plan a new home. An outstanding feature service, an impressive list of noted writers, a full section for sports, for society, for suburban news, a full page of comics, a market page — all these are new developments. The change from seven to eight columns and the increase in depth of column are others.

During all our growth we have kept the Appleton point of view plainly in sight. We have worked to further the progress of the city and the territory it serves. The tabulation on the left indicates something of what the Post-Crescent has done. Local items have developed into a complete coverage of every phase of civic activity. Significantly enough, though the Post-Crescent has taken on the metropolitan manner, the relation of local news to all news carried in the newspaper is actually larger than when we were in the small city stage. The total amount of all news carried is, of course, strikingly larger.

Let us add this suggestion: Can you name more than one Post-Crescent in Appleton's own newspaper history?

Here are a few terse facts, highly indicative of Post-Crescent progress. Side by side we place two typical issues of their respective periods.

The Story of Sue

MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

I told my mother I'd sit in the car and wait, when she said you would be back soon," Jack called. "Are you going to be busy now?" Jack had sought her again!

She even forgot Barbara. She slipped down into the low-cushioned seat and her heart and dancing blue eyes laughed at the stars and the night and the funny how one man's presence could lift such a load!

"My father gave me a lecture this morning, Sue," Jack's deep minor voice drawled. "He said that it was time I settled down."

"Too many poker parties?" she asked, and she didn't know how bright her eyes were with blue dreams or how flushed her smooth cheeks had grown, and the cherry lure of her lips, Jack looked at her closely, then glanced away quickly.

"No, not that way. But he thinks I should be a young man with an aim and acquire a wife and family, and a was bill and grocery bill and bridge—lamps or whatever else you set for wedding gifts."

Sue's heart turned over. Was Jack... Could it mean... Don't course not! He had merely brought her out to talk to because Barbara was away or busy.

"What do you think I should do?" she asked him.

"Whatever you want to do. Let your heart be your guide, Jack," she said the feel of his rough coat against her shoulder... but she told herself she must think up sensible answers now. "What do you think you'll do?"

"Nothing!" A surging tide of relief came back to Sue. At least he hadn't brought her out here to tell her about Barbara. That was good. No plans in sight. Where do you want to go?"

"Let's just ride." The time, the place and the man had been collected. Sue was telling herself. "How did Jimmy's contest come out?" Jack asked pretty soon.

"I don't know," Sue answered. "I don't think Jimmy knows, either. I don't see much of him any more." She was surprised because she held only an impersonal interest.

Because there were so few places along the roads of the city where people could go to eat and dance, their choice their favorite and Sue realized how relieved she was not to have to give that quick look around to see if Jack had brought another girl. But she and Jack both gave startled explanations of surprise as they passed Barbara's home later.

Harry Becker, smiling happily, was assisting Barbara as she got out of his car.

THE TULE MARSH MURDER, by Nancy Barr Mavity.
We took a vow about six months ago that we would not review any more detective stories, murder mysteries, or tales of crime. There are so many on the market that it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to keep them all straight and weed out the trash from the good ones. Nearly every week, some publisher advertises another great detective tale. Usually each one is worse than the last. But The Tule Marsh Murder by Nancy Barr Mavity, published by The Crime Club, Inc., and distributed in the Philippine Islands by the Philippine Education Company has an unusual claim to fame. It is the story of a perfect crime, discovered only because its perpetrator wished it to be and because he loved two people well enough to share his secret with them.

Of course, there are perfect crimes. But naturally these are the ones we do not hear about, and so we have built up the legend that all criminals leave some trace and show some weakness. In The Tule Marsh Murder, no one seems to be the criminal. There are many people implicated, but not one who cannot find a loophole of escape. This is rather a different method of approach than most writers use. Usually every one is proven guilty, and the least likely shoulders the final blame of the story.

We are handicapped slightly in reviewing this story, because it would be so easy to give away the whole show, and that would certainly take away its charm. However, one of two points of interest are safe to discuss. There is a keen human element in the story that hits it out of the cold, analytical class onto the plane of good novels. A love affair of course complicates matters, but the two majors in the affair are individuals with charm and personality. The guiding spirit—the great Dr. Cavendish—is a man worth knowing well and the author takes great delight in scaring up all of the anecdotes about him that she possibly can. The readers are not over-animated by the bungling attempts of the police to solve the problem. In fact, in this story, the police are not futile blockheads, most detective story writers tell us about.

The story is very good. Of course, there is always a surplus of conversation in a story of this kind. But the author succeeds very well in descriptions, analyses, and comedy. She has a light touch of humor—and a heavy touch for tragedy. And both are pleasantly regulated.

We commend The Tule Marsh Murder to your attention because it is neither sensational nor showy. Its characters are real people, and its plot could easily be based on fact. Nothing in the book calls for a "yellow sheet," or for space in the Daily Mail, and the very fact that the plot has restrained distinguishes it from the thousands of other detective stories which are flooding America.

KLEIST PRIZE AWARD
Anna Seghers, author of The Revolt of the Fishermen, the Kleist prize novel for 1929, is the second woman to win the award. Longmans, Green and Company has procured the American rights to the book and will publish it in February.

One of the most coveted literary awards in Germany, the Kleist prize has been won by such writers as Arnold Zweig, Fritz von Unruh, and Alfred Neumann. It was founded by a group of eminent German writers to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the death of Heinrich von Kleist, dramatist, novelist and poet. The winner is chosen by one man, appointed by a Committee.

The winning novel this year, The Revolt of the Fishermen, tells a story as tragic as Kleist's own life which reached its climax in a "suicide pact" of a century ago. Embittered by poverty, he was persuaded by his mistress, Henrietta Voel, to meet her for a last time at a house near Potsdam. He had tried everything. The son of a Prussian officer must serve in the army; for a time he endured the rigorous military discipline. After the battle of Jena, he resigned his post and secured a civil position. Then he tried journalism and wrote several political pamphlets which were ignored by an indifferent public. The woman he loved was married to a prosperous Berlin merchant. His life

FEW CONCESSIONS IN CHICAGO WOULD GIVE IT NEW START

Proof of Willingness to Co-operate Would Result in Aid from State

BY OWEN L. SCOTT
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Chicago — Despite the financial helplessness of the government, and five terrific bomb blasts within one day, Chicago today is far from the road to anarchy. Rather the spectacle of municipal mismanagement, so glaring that even King George can chuckle, is considered by her citizens as the surest prod to a better ordered future.

Only a few minor concessions on the part of the town's mayor—Big Bill Thompson, who still bankers for a future in politics—and the present chaos would turn a prospect of financial order. The 40,000 unemployed, many hungry and in want, could be paid, other bills met and the city rendered immediately solvent.

But hordes of political hangers-on, who admittedly have been fattening at the public crime, make few concessions without a howl—and it is their cries which hold up the procession. They are convinced that they must take their medicine and the going will be smooth, but as it was for that big local taxing body, the sanitary district, which squeezed three thousand jobs out of a total of 4,000.

Just three demands are made of the politicians: first, that they keep city expenditures within receipts; second, that they establish a modified budget; third, that a bond issue be floated to meet all non-funded obligations and an end made to the policy of issuing warrants in anticipation of taxes. When they have agreed to these moves, Governor Louis Emerson has expressed a willingness to call the legislature to enact necessary legislation.

If the word "reform" were not anathema to Chicago voters, civic leaders would utilize the present crisis to boom a constitutional convention and a model city government, which might be the envy of municipalities everywhere.

GROWN TOO FAT
They have their model placed in moth balls at present. Under it, Chicago would merge with the fringe of towns and cities in Illinois which go to make up much of the metropolitan area.

Then it would select a council—one alderman to a ward. This selection would take place once every four years. The aldermen would then select a mayor, who would be indefinite, subject to recall. The mayor would in effect be city manager.

At the same time the voters would elect a chief justice of the metropolitan court, a consolidation of the multiplicity of court systems now existing. The chief justice would appoint the other judges.

The county government would be abolished within the city limits of the expanded Chicago-Twin City district, now one of the largest taxing bodies, likewise would be abolished and its duties and powers vested in the city. The same would happen to the board of education, which now is a district government. Eighteen park boards, now all taxing bodies would be united with the forest preserve district and made a city department. Existing units of the city would be simplified.

Chicago's troubles come from the fact that she has grown too fast for her government. While she was busy with problems of business expansion, politicians settled on her government and dug themselves in. Now the town may have to use dynamite to get them out.

FORESTER OFFERS CUTTING PROGRAM

Land Zoning and Fire Prevention Are Essentials, He Says

Madison, (AP)—Forestry control, incentive, land zoning and fire prevention are the essentials to a selective cutting program. R. B. Goodman of Marinette told the third timber conference held by the land commission here.

Goodman said it had been found that a lumberman could take out less than six per cent of the trees and scale 50 per cent of the merchandise. Timber volume and yet realize 70 per cent in value.

"This forms of the basis for a detailed consideration of all the problems involved in changing from the old method of clean cutting to the new Operation of selective logging," he said. "The growth annually in value of the forest capital left after selective logging, forms the incentive for the undertaking."

Selective cutting has had to be regulated to improve rather than to damage the remaining forest, he said. Where the owner is cutting or where the owner is selling selective selective stumps, it is essential to his interest in the remaining forest that the marking of trees to be cut should be supervised by an experienced forester. This he said, was the second rule for selective cutting.

If land is more valuable for agriculture use than it is for the forest, selective cutting does not matter, he said. Such land should be cleared by clean cutting, according to Goodman.

Regarding the last condition relative to selective cutting Mr. Goodman said: "No selective logging should be undertaken in forest areas that are so situated that the owner cannot efficiently cooperate with the conservation commission's fire prevention program."

Grace And Poise Result From This Exercise

BY JAC ATER
Reducing exercises that really are effective have a two-fold purpose. In the first place, they actually take off fat. In the second, they tone up the body, strengthen muscles and teach one not only to be conscious of muscles but to control them. For only through muscular control are real grace and poise possible.

While any of the exercises I have given for rounding the 1930 curves do their bit towards this certain exercises have an especial value.

Not the least of these is the high-leg balance exercise. This is one that reduces the fat in such place as the back of the neck and the waistline. The real center of all action lies in the body muscles. Every time one moves a leg, or arm, raises the head or walks, unless that portion of the body lying between the shoulders and the waist is conscious and directing the action, one falls to be lithe, poised, graceful.

Therefore I suggest this exercise as a way to make those muscles throw the back, the waist and the diaphragm conscious of their responsibility in this fight for grace which every woman craves.

1. After you are limbered up, lie flat on the floor, with arms stretched out along your sides. Slowly raise both feet together, until they are straight up in the air.

2. Next, keeping them straight in the air, without tipping this side or that, or sinking back, raise them high, lifting the body up off the floor until your weight rests upon the shoulders. Brace your back with your hands. When high on your shoulders, tip the legs forward slightly, never enough to lose your balance, then backward, slightly, never letting them go over your head until they reach the floor. The whole test is your ability to control your feet and legs. You may tip over when raising. You certainly will if you are too heavy. But work until you can move just as far this way or that as you want to. You will find it exhilarating to realize finally that your muscular co-ordination is perfect.

TOMORROW: Standing on your head for health.

The high-leg balance exercise.

Cabinet Dinners Please Hoovers For Informality

Washington — (AP)—It is a busy season for President and Mrs. Hoover, who seem to be enjoying the series of cabinet dinners in their honor.

These are informal affairs, which give them an opportunity to meet persons outside of official life in Washington. Indicative of this informality, was the reply to a query given by Mrs. William Dewitt Mitchell, who with the attorney general gave a dinner Tuesday night, that gloves should not be worn. From that it is inferred that it is the wish of Mrs. Hoover to have these dinners more like home events.

A number of guests from the Twin Cities attended the Mitchell dinner. The company dining with the President and Mrs. Hoover included Justice and Mrs. Samuel E. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Victor F. Riden, Mr. and

SENATE COMMITTEE HEARINGS ON RADIO NEAR FINAL STAGES

Group Hopes to Start Drafting Legislation Within Few Days

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Washington — (AP) — After nine months of intensive investigation during which communications in general and radio in particular were subjected to the most rigorous scrutiny since their advent, the senate interstate commerce committee is getting down to the brass tacks stage of its legislative task.

Within 10 days, Chairman Couzens confidently believes the committee will end its hearings and actually draft the proposed legislation which would bring all fields of communication, wire and wireless under common federal jurisdiction. A handful of witnesses remain to be heard.

Since last May, when the investigation began, all of the big guns of American communications have had their say before the committee. Every phase of the arts—interstate and international—and all of their complicated patent, financial and structural ramifications have been traversed. Sensational charges of a stifling American monopoly in radio, which would broaden itself to include the whole field of external communications, have been made and denied.

WILL WRITE LAW

Out of this maze of testimony the committee will undertake to write a law that will insure competent regulation of communications and protect the interests of the nation. It must decide whether the present statutory inhibition against the joint operation of wire and wireless should be repealed as a means of safeguarding America's leadership in world communications. It must decide whether radio as the newest and the progressive of the communications arts should go it alone, competitive with the cables and wires, or be permitted to work cooperatively with them.

It is almost a certainty that the committee will recommend the creation of a communications committee, as proposed in the Couzens bill. The bill as it is before the committee at present, however, will be tossed into the wastebasket, as was originally intended, as the proposed law written on the basis of the sweeping investigation. But months and maybe a year will elapse before so important a piece of legislation completes its legislative voyage—and it will be turbulent in spots.

REFLOAT DESTROYER
Gibraltar — (AP)—The British destroyer Vergara, which ran aground near King's Bastion, in a fierce gale last night after dragging her anchor, was refloated today. The ship was not damaged.

Mrs. Thomas L. Daniels and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Doherty, all of St. Paul; while from Minneapolis came Mr. and Mrs. Clive I. Jaffary. Miss Ada L. Comstock, a member of Radcliffe college and a member of the president's law enforcement commission, also was a guest.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will dine with Postmaster General and Mrs. Walter F. Brown, when they will meet a group of Ohio politicians.

Information has come from the White House that there will be some refurbishing in the way of interior decoration in the executive mansion when the official season is over. It is understood a woman, Mrs. James E. Curtis of New York and Washington, will do the work. Mrs. Curtis formerly was Laura Meriam, and is the daughter of William H. Merriam, formerly director of the census and former governor of Minnesota.

Mrs. Curtis has a fashionable little dress shop on Connecticut-ave, and so far as is known, the decoration of a White House drawing room will be her first effort in this field.

For the first time in the history of the White House, a reception was given there Thursday night to the senate. Congress in former years did not have such a large membership, and the first division of the two branches in such a manner gave a better opportunity to invite outside guests to meet the senate members.

An elegantly appointed or sociable dinner party of fifty was given by Senator and Mrs. Charles S. Deneen for Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Gann at the Willard hotel early in the week. Many senators and their wives were guests and while Senator and Mrs. Deneen did not give out their list of guests—they seldom do—it was a most complimentary party.

Mrs. Hoover will be honor guest at the annual breakfast of the Congressional club given for the first lady, Feb. 14. The breakfast will be served in the Pan-American Union building, where the club entertained the year before for Mrs. Coolidge. An elaborate but brief program is planned. Mrs. Porter H. Dale, president of the club, will preside.

START AVIATION MEDICINE SCHOOL

Federal Government Trying to Cut Casualties Due to Human Element

Washington — (AP)—The necessity of looking after the physical and mental welfare of flyers to avoid airplane accidents caused by the human element, has resulted in the establishment of a division of aviation medicine in the office of the chief of the army air corps.

The war department announced today that 60 flight surgeons have finished at the recently established school of aviation medicine at Brooksfield, San Antonio, Texas. These graduates are stationed at army flying fields and in the overseas departments.

Recently published statistics, the department said, have shown that 59 per cent of the accidents in commercial flying 62 per cent of the army and 74 per cent in the navy are due to failure of the pilot and the human element. While there has been a steady decrease in the casualties, it was reported there had been no decrease in the casualties due to failures of pilots.

To qualify as a flight surgeon, a medical officer must take an intensive three months basic course at the school of aviation medicine. When he graduates he is assigned to one of the air corps stations and continues to specialize in aviation medicine. All of the flight surgeons are required to make frequent and regular flights, several are qualified pilots.

BARTHELMUSS IN NEW CHINESE ROLE

Acting Is as Good as Possible Considering Theme of Plot

BY JOHN S. COHEN, JR.
Special Dispatch to Post-Crescent
New York — (CPA)—Once again Richard Barthelmess plays a Chinese. At the Warner theatre Thursday night he appeared in his fourth talking picture, "Son of the Gods," adopted from Rex Beach's recent novel of the same name.

The racial theme is always interesting and "Son of the Gods" has very effective moments, but it winds up as something of a disappointment—a rather ambitious disappointment.

Mr. Barthelmess has probably the finest record of the talkies stars. In "Weary River," "Drag" and "Young Nowheres," he played simply, intelligently and likeably.

Perceptibly he has grown as an actor. This growth is noticeable in "Son of the Gods" but as often as not his role is poorly written and the writing, more than anything else, causes him occasionally to seem to lapse into banality.

The son of a wise and great Chinese father, he is weaker than his parent. The prejudices of the white race in America tend to defeat him. Accordingly, he leaves college, leaves his father, and without money takes a trip around the world; he wants to find himself, to find contentment and love.

In the south of France he meets Constance Bennett, as one of the spoiled, cruel, grasping daughters of the rich. She falls passionately in love with him and he with her. When she discovers that he is a Chinaman her rage and arrogance get the better of her and she horsewhips him before the crowds at Monte Carlo.

So far, so good, and had the picture ended on a subsequent scene—wherein Mr. Barthelmess was about to discover that the path to greatness and contentment was to follow in his father's footsteps, that is to discover it in himself, the film would have been a lot better fifty times better. Instead, the old influence of censorship, or state rights, or just plain stupidity, caused the author to discover that Mr. Barthelmess wasn't a Chinaman. He has been a white founding and had been adopted by Oriental parents.

This was not only destructive to the rather ambitious idea of the film, but it was anticlimactic. Consequently the film slid downhill in the last few reels.

STAGE AND SCREEN

HOT FOR PARIS

One of the besetting sins of Hollywood is "brain theft." No original idea that means anything is safe from the copyist; which will always be a sore spot to El Brendel, famous Swede comic of stage and screen who now has a justifiable complaint to make.

For many years Brendel, in big time vaudeville and in musical comedy fame with his famous "break-away suit." This was a full dress suit, worn by the Swede character with the dead "pan."

During the course of a stage flirtation with his girl friend, the suit gradually left him, first the collar, then the shirt and finally all there was of it. Returning to the stage in a barbershop that too soon proceeded to go to pieces.

It was Brendel's stock in trade, synonymous with his name. Great then, was his chagrin to later see the identical suit and business done by a screen comedian.

Currently Brendel, who scored big comedy hits in "The Cock Eyed World" and "Sunny Side Up" is appearing in "Hot for Paris," the Roald Walsh Fox Movietone which comes to the Fox Theatre for 3 days beginning Monday. Victor McLaglen the "Flag of What Price Glory" and "The Cock Eyed World" heads the cast. Fifi Dorey, featured in "They Had to See Paris" with Will Rogers, and Polly Moran are also featured.

"Hot for Paris" is a story of a sailor who holds the winning ticket in the Big Calcutta Sweepstakes. Ignorant that he is the winner of a million dollars, he eludes every effort made to hand him the money. With Brendel, he flees to Havre and there encounters a French singer and dancer who involves him in many hilarious scenes. This is done in that rippling French style.

Ellis K. Wells, who wrote the sparkling dialog for "The Cock Eyed World," has given "Hot for Paris" even more peppy lines. Several songs, numbers, written by Walter Donaldson and Edgar Leslie are sung by Miss Dorey and McLaglen.

The supporting cast includes such well known players as Charles Judels, Lennox Pawle and George Fawcett.

CLUBBER ATTACKS 2 WOMEN IN CHICAGO

Chicago — (AP)—Two women were victims of separate attacks by a man with a club who struck them down in a Gold Coast neighborhood late last night. Both women were taken to hospitals, but their injuries were not serious.

Miss Josephine Belski, 29, was attacked within a few rods of her Dearborn-st. home. The man leaped from the darkness, struck her over the head, and fled.

The other victim was Mrs. Lucy Hartman, maid for the family of an architect living on Bank-st. The only description police had of the attacker was that he was young and well dressed.

BANKER DIES
Hoopston, Ill. — (AP) — Edward M. Welles, 77, wealthy banker of New York, Conn., died suddenly this morning at the home here of his son-in-law, William McFerrin, president of the First National bank. Death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage after a short illness.

LIFE'S ODDITIES

"Nothing spoils my appearance like a shiny nose."

Many Informal Affairs Being Held In New York

New York — (AP)—Informality rules on princess lines and finished with a society's gambols these days. As though weary by the monopoly that attended balls and dinners of the past few weeks, the fashionable are flitting their heels in far less formal pastures—and enjoying it apparently.

Impromptu luncheons, casual tea, informal dances and house parties have filled their hours this week. And, with all the chatter of spring costumes and plans for travel that sprinkles the smart folk's doings a decidedly vernal atmosphere fills the air, despite the fact that snow has often filtered down. Park-ave. canyons during the last few days.

Poker is a pet diversion in the informal atmosphere that rules. The concentration once bestowed on bridge hands is giving way to a focus on chips and royal flushes. After impromptu house parties the debutantes and college girls, their mothers and fathers, are to be found grouped around a poker table with small thought for anything else save whether to "draw" or "stand." Many of the debutantes play the game with the skill of experts.

The informal teas that are filling so many afternoons have been notable for the display of the costumes that heralded the approach of spring and the talk on that subject so dear to the feminine heart—"What am I going to wear next season?"

At the tea which Mrs. Greenough Townsend gave recently for Mrs. Olivia Wyndham, a number of striking costumes were worn. Mrs. Lucy King chose a brown tweed jacket suit—a vernal vogue which promises to be very popular. It was designed with a three quarter length coat cut on princess lines and finished with a scarf collar of the same fabric. The skirt, which flared decidedly, terminated four or five inches below her knee.

Mrs. David Milton, the former Abbie Rockefeller, favored a costume of red bordering, on scarlet, while Lady Elliott appeared in a beige cloth and silk ensemble, collared by beige fox.

Miss Wyndham, who prefers the tailored type of costume, received with Mrs. Greenough in a two-piece navy blue moire suit, made with a soft silk vest and collar.

In the midst of their caresses the smart folk have also busied themselves in aid of charity. Many members of the junior league were to be found every morning this week at the league's headquarters busily engaged in selling tickets for the second and third performances of a new Broadway play, which they have taken over for two days next week in aid of their baby shelter.

Other debutantes serving as usher and program girls, whisked up and down the aisles at the concert given for the benefit of the New York Diet Kitchen association at Hotel Astor on Tuesday when Madame Queenie Mario of the Metropolitan Opera company and the Schola quartet of the Philadelphia orchestra presented a musical program.

Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Otto Kahn and Mrs. Myron Taylor were among a large number of women who engaged tables for the tea and bridge held Thursday afternoon in the St. Regis hotel.

HAMILTON THINKS AMERICAN FILMS HELP WORLD PEACE

Produce Pictures in English Language, Famous Comedian Urges

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Hollywood — (AP)—Make American films in the American language for foreign consumption and you'll do more to promote international understanding and world peace than a dozen disarmament conferences.

This is the contention of Neil Hamilton, who, while on tour here, has come into a universal headliners' rank. Foreign exhibitors stand forth as the one prominent factor to put a foot down on the "parlousness" and "preachiness" stuff. He also stands forth as the one American actor to date who speaks to the heart for the microphone. In a film he is rehearsing now they seek to put his native Boston accent.

Meanwhile, the Hamilton theory—now to Hollywood—seems to receive serious attention. He thought he had the theory in this language, but now more than ever he wants to hear English and learn the chance to make it.

"Study English," Hamilton says, "I am not to be denied in my dressing room by the Paramount lot. 'What, if I can learn to talk microphone English that'll be my goal for a lifetime.'"

WHY WARP TONGUE?
"In my opinion there is no need for Hollywood to warp its vocabulary by learning an alien tongue. English is rapidly becoming the world language."

As I go to pains to find out after three lessons in French—and my further opinion is that foreign countries are only too glad to listen to a film in English and scratch an English lesson while the plot unravels.

Neil Hamilton, by the way, puts down his considerable stock. All most two yards tall, husky in proportion, he has walked with a firm tread not only over the French in regular verbs but also through glamorous roles in "Brain Gaster," "The Studio Murder Mystery," and "Darkened Rooms." He is now a member of the A. E. F. in a film containing these two swarthy dough boys, Moran and Mack.

"And what do you know?" he glowered with a rueful smile, "according to the mike my American accent is too good! Here's half of Hollywood trying to remember to say 'half' instead of 'half' and 'can't' instead of 'can't' and when I pull a perfectly good, and native 'can't' before the mike, everybody giggles."

"They'll be asking me to split infinitives next! Do you think?" he added wistfully, "that maybe Americans will eventually learn to talk English, like Bostonians, if everyone in Hollywood keeps on practicing the London accent?"

Money Coming In . . .

It is a pleasant sensation to get money without working for it. Dividends are paid on our shares every six months, January 1 and July 1. That check will look good. Invest now and pave your road to success.

BROWNE ASKS FOR PRODUCTION FROM "COLORED BUTTER"

Urges Passage of Amendment to Oleomargarine Act

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent

Washington—Congress should protect the public from being deceived into using butter substitutes when they want butter, and should protect the imperiled dairy industry against the competition of cheap substitutes, Representative Edward E. Browne of Wisconsin said today.

Representative Browne pointed out that this "Neutrine," one of the new compounds, is advertised long with butter as "Neutrine colored butter," and that it is difficult for the average person to tell it from butter.

"This fraud has been perpetrated to such an extent that bills similar to this bill have been passed by more than a dozen states," Representative Browne said. "Wisconsin is one of the states which have such a law."

"Butter is the basic dairy product," Representative Browne continued, "and any substitute which competes with butter affects all the dairy products, including milk, cheese, and cream. January 1, 1930, the butter quotation in New York for New York State was 35 cents a pound, which was 17 cents lower than at the same time last year."

"During the first eleven months in 1929, there were 320,320,000 pounds of oleomargarine produced in the United States, and increase over the same period of last year of $1,380,000 pounds. December 1st there were 11,000,000 pounds of butter in storage, an amount greater than ever before at this time of the year."

"Last year, 1,800,000,000 pounds of oils and fats were imported into the United States to compete with the dairyman, flax and cotton growers, livestock farmer, and fisherman. "We are now producing within one-half per cent of a surplus of dairy products in the United States."

"If the dairy farmer is fairly protected from the competition of oleomargarine and other imitations of butter and given a fair duty on his beef fat, he can make that branch of agriculture profitable. The value of dairy product of the United States on the farms amounted last year to over $2,000,000,000."

"This Congress should not only pass the bill and prevent the American people from being deceived in using a substitute for butter which does not contain near the food value or health-giving vitamins contained in butter, but should encourage the dairy farmer by protecting his products, not only against fraudulent imitation, but should give him equal protection with the manufacturers."

It is very evident, Representative Browne added, that butter cannot compete with imitations which are made from oleomargarine oil, lard, lin, lard extracts, calow extracts, beef fat, suet, lard, lard oil, fish fat, vegetable oil, intestinal fat, and oil fat.

Menasha—Henry Sheerin, who has been a resident of Menasha for more than 50 years, lost his hearing in one ear this week. LEE BIRTHPLACE TO BE RESTORED AND MADE SHRINE

Building Was One of First Seats of Culture, Refinement in Virginia

Washington—Flying down the Potomac from Washington, an airplane tourist passes over Arlington, Mount Vernon, Gunston Hall, where James Monroe was born, Wakefield, birthplace of George Washington—and then, finally, passes over a great brick building shaped like a letter "H" set in the words of historic Westmoreland county, Virginia.

This building, one of the first seats of culture and refinement in the old colony of Virginia, is about to be restored to its former condition and thrown open to the people of the nation as a permanent shrine.

It is the home of one of the most famous families in American history—the Lees of Virginia. And the campaign to preserve it as a memento of famous men and vanished days is coming to a climax just as the southland is preparing to celebrate, on Jan. 19, the 122d birthday anniversary of the old family's most distinguished member—General Robert E. Lee.

The historic building is called Stratford Hall, and its story goes back 279 years, clear to the early days of Virginia.

Richard Lee, immigrant pioneer ancestor of the Lees, bought the land from the Indians in 1650. Stratford Hall was built just 200 years ago, by Thomas Lee, who was enabled to build it by means of a gift from Queen Caroline, wife of King George III of England.

In Stratford Hall were born Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, signers of the Declaration of Independence. Here, too, were born Lighthorse Harry Lee, brilliant military leader of the Revolution, and his great son, Robert E. Lee; military genius of the Confederacy.

Lee homes in America have as distinguished a tradition as Stratford Hall.

It looks more like a medieval castle than a colonial home. Built solidly of brick, and surrounded by a cluster of quaint outbuildings, it shows its age plainly, and it has lost the splendor of the era when the Lees were called the most beautiful in the south. The great brick chimneys that rise in clusters of four look like old military battlements—and so, in a sense, they once were, for from their balconies a lookout used to be kept for roving parties of hostile Indians.

Back of the mansion on the Potomac, 12 miles wide at that point, sweeping away from the cliffs that mark the eastern shore of Maryland, in front a road leads out to the King's Highway, which extends from Washington to the Chesapeake Bay, and a part of which the United States government is now converting into a memorial road.

Fittingly enough, the movement to restore and preserve Stratford Hall began in New England about a year ago, when members of the William Alexander, Jr., chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy of Connecticut, signed the contract for the purchase of the place, raised funds for the initial payment of $5000, and formed the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation to complete the payments, restore the mansion and grounds and convert the estate into a national shrine similar to Mount Vernon.

Just as Mount Vernon is governed and directed by a board of women comprising members from each state, Stratford will be governed by a director, from each state—all of whom will be women—under the leadership of a national chairman. Assisting the women will be national advisory board of men of national prominence. Among these latter are such men as Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Governor Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, John W. Davis of New York and General R. A. Sneed, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans.

There remains to be raised approximately $200,000, which is being subscribed throughout the country through the efforts of volunteer workers.

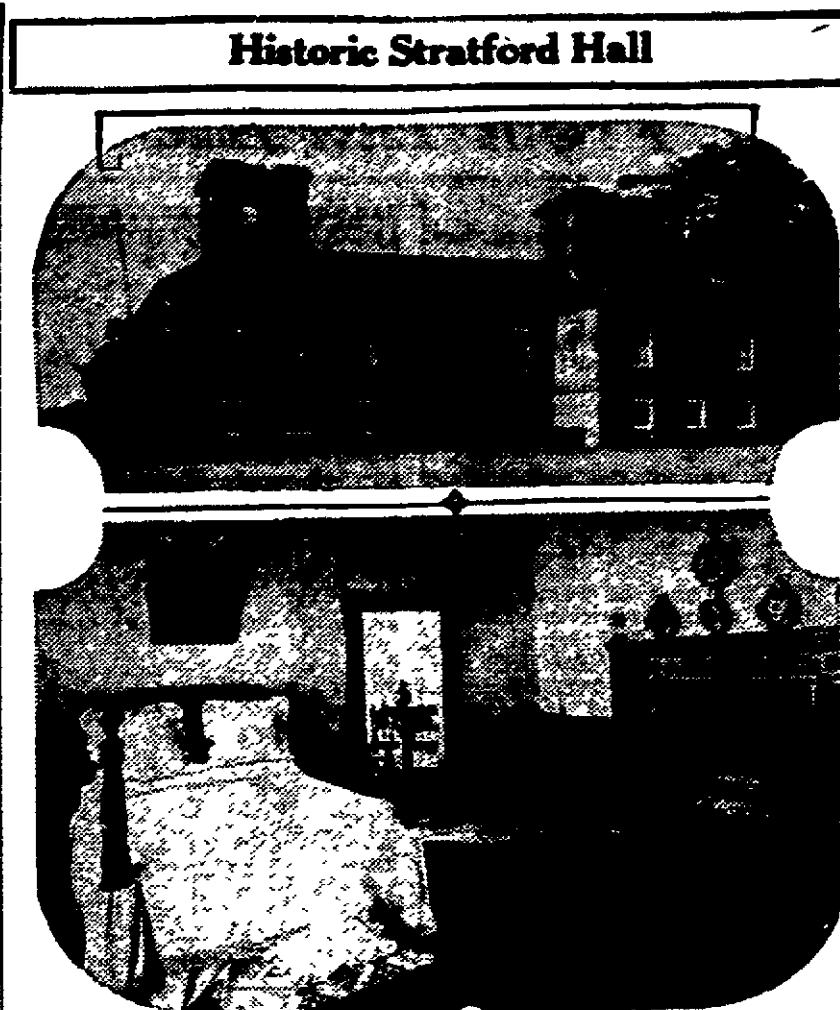

Menasha—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peterson and daughter, Helen, left for Florida Saturday. They are making the trip by automobile.

Lillian Beachkofski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Beachkofski, submitted an application for the removal of her tonsils at Theda Clark hospital Saturday.

Clarence A. Loeschner has gone to Fort Sheridan, Ill., for two weeks training with the reserve officers corps. During his absence Mrs. Loeschner will accompany her parents on a trip to New Orleans.

Mrs. Frank Magalske returned Friday evening from Pontiac, Mich., where she attended the funeral of her sister-in-law, Mrs. A. Wayne, held at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning at St. Michael church. On her way home she stopped at Grand Rapids, Mich., to visit her sister, Sister Mary Charlotte who is a teacher in the parochial schools.

EXPECT SELL-OUT AT HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TILT
Menasha—The annual basketball game between Menasha and Neenah high schools will take place at 9 o'clock Saturday night at Duffe des Morts gymnasium. The starting time was set back to make it possible for merchants and their employees to attend. The game will be preceded by a curtain raiser between the school teams. If the two high schools win, the proceeds of the sale of seats in the gymnasium will be well filled. The return game will be played at Neenah the latter part of the month.

First Season Ends Tonight In Chicago Opera House

Chicago—(AP)—With the broken strains of the lovely "O Bell! Alma Immemorata" in Marcellina in "Donizetti's 'L'Elisir d'Amore'" tonight, the first season in the new Chicago Civic Opera house will be ended.

In Boston Monday evening, Feb. 3, the company opens its annual tour which will include 60 performances in 15 cities, ending in Kansas City Saturday, March 29.

The tour will include the following cities: Boston, Detroit, Columbus, Ohio; Louisville, Jackson, Miss.; New Orleans, Memphis, Shreveport, La.; Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Texas; Oklahoma, Wichita, Kan.; Lincoln, Neb.; Minneapolis, Des Moines, Ia.; Omaha, Neb.; and Kansas City.

With notable revivals and novelties added to the repertoire, the season marked the debut of two promising sopranos. One, a protégé of the great Calve, was Kathleen Kersting, who took her first bow as Marcellina in Donizetti's "Fidelio." To give the people of her home city an opportunity to hear her, Wichita, Kas., was included in the annual tour.

The other notable debut was that of Hattie Stiles, as Elsa in Lohengrin. Miss Stiles came to Chicago from the Opera Comique in Paris. Outstanding among the revivals was Beethoven's "Fidelio," not heard here in 55 years. Mascagni's "Iris" and Zandonai's "Conchita" were the season's two novelties.

Samuel Insull, president of the opera, would not discuss the success of the first season in the new home. In previous years the company has appeared at the auditorium.

"I can say nothing until I make my report to the guarantors," he said, but from the general offices of the opera came the announcement that "the attendance and receipts for the season established a new high record for Chicago."

One interesting item was a report from the business office that the balconies were sold out for every performance. The entire house was sold out for both performances today.

Three favorites of the company—Mary Garden, Rosa Raisa and Tito Schipa—emphasized that the magnificence of the new theatre itself was largely responsible for the season's success.

"From every standpoint, the season has been the finest in the history of Chicago's opera organization," was Garden's comment, and Raisa added: "This is due not only to the marvelous productions but to the beautiful theatre which has become our home. Acoustically, it is the Stradivarius of theatres." And Schipa put in the final touch with a word more: "It gives the artist a technical background which he can have nowhere else in the world. No one can say more."

"Will you sing in concert in Amarillo this season?" Miss Garden was asked.

"No, I'm afraid Gene Howe will have to come to San Antonio or Houston," she replied, smiling.

American policy on the international bank is not yet clear and there are indications that broad questions of international politics have as much to do with the final determination of what the Federal Reserve system will do about it as the economic factors though the latter are rapidly becoming important in domestic politics. Unless some improvement in the business situation is apparent by next autumn it would not be surprising to see republicans less a number of seats in the house.

Everything nowadays is becoming so closely interwoven with the importance of improving business inside of the United States that if closer cooperation with European banking machinery will assist in raising the employment levels and consequently the purchasing power of this country, the tendency will be to ignore the past and explore the possibilities of an increased foreign trade.

New York—The reason for the fact that we have such remarkable capitalists of industry, in the opinion of Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman, economist of Columbia university, is the defection of the most brilliant minds into business. And there is a shortage of scientists; prizes dangled before those who enter the business world must be made possible for the thinker.

The textile industry stands second in the use of power, utilizing nearly 4,000,000 horsepower.

WORK WITH WORLD BANK
There are other suggestions too that the Federal Reserve system could find ways of being helpful in the use of power, by bringing about closer cooperation with the new international bank which in itself will be a factor in stabilizing world-wide conditions with respect to gold.

Vikes Lose To Monmouth; Meet Cornell Tonight

LAWRENCE CAGERS DROP FIRST MIDWEST GAME BY 22-19 SCORE

Must Defeat Iowa Quintet To Keep in Conference Running

THE Lawrence basketball team and its good Viking ship set sail Friday evening in quest of continued first place in the Midwest conference. But someone erred and along about the end of the first half it was discovered the Vikes had never lifted their anchor and as a result were almost where they had started from despite much puffing and unfurling of sails.

That late start cost Lawrence Friday night's game a 22-19 score and Monmouth now leads the Midwest by virtue of three wins and no defeats.

As has been recounted the Vikings were still trying to get started when the first half came to an end. Monmouth in the meantime has dashed hither and yon about Alexander's yard showing speed seldom seen hereabouts and ran up a respectable 15 and 7 lead at half time.

When play was resumed in the second half Lawrence seemed a bit more inspired but still was not moving fast enough to stop the four little fellows and the lanky center who comprise the Monmouth quintet. Near the end of the game Lawrence drew within three points of tying the score but that was as close as they were destined to come.

Marocco, forward, was the big thorn for the Vikings and he sneaked in six field goals. Corgnati, a smiling, black headed guy, who is a clever player and who knows it, was another of the Monmouth stars. He continually directed team play and when he started his team stalling in the last period engineered an almost perfect job.

MEET CORNELL TONIGHT
Tonight is another night, however and perhaps when the Vikings set sail against Cornell up at the gym they'll weigh that old anchor before the game begins and come to life. Cornell also played last evening, losing to the Ripon college Redmen by a score of 26 and 20.

A victory for the Vikings tonight is necessary if they are to remain in conference running. Not only will defeat shunt them down into the depths of conference standings and almost ruin the basketball season, but will bring much loss in prestige. Ripon has been bumped off by nearly everyone so far and for Lawrence to lose to a team that was defeated by Ripon is just one of those things that can't happen.

Friday evening's defeat probably resulted from the nine day layoff forced on the Vikings since the Carroll game. The entire team was dead on its feet, the men handled the ball poorly and moved around as if pegged to the floor or entirely at a loss to figure it all out. Or perhaps it seemed that way because of the fast maneuvering of the Monmouth forwards and guards.

Saturday evening's game will be six at 8 o'clock. There will be no preliminary game.

"HOLD OUT FEVER" HITS MAJOR NINES

Giants, Yanks, Athletics Want Increases in Salary for 1930

New York (AP)—"Hold Out Fever" has struck the three metropolitan major league baseball clubs. Babe Ruth thinks the Yankees should pay him $85,000 annually for the next three years. The Yankees have countered with an offer of $75,000 annually for two years.

The Yankees are having difficulty also with Tony Lazzeri, second baseman, and Waite Hoyt, the one-time boy wonder right-handed pitcher. Giants who dislike terms offered by Ell Walker, left handed pitcher who led the league in effectiveness last season; third baseman Freddie Lindstrom; first baseman Bill Terry and outfielder Ed J. Ruseh.

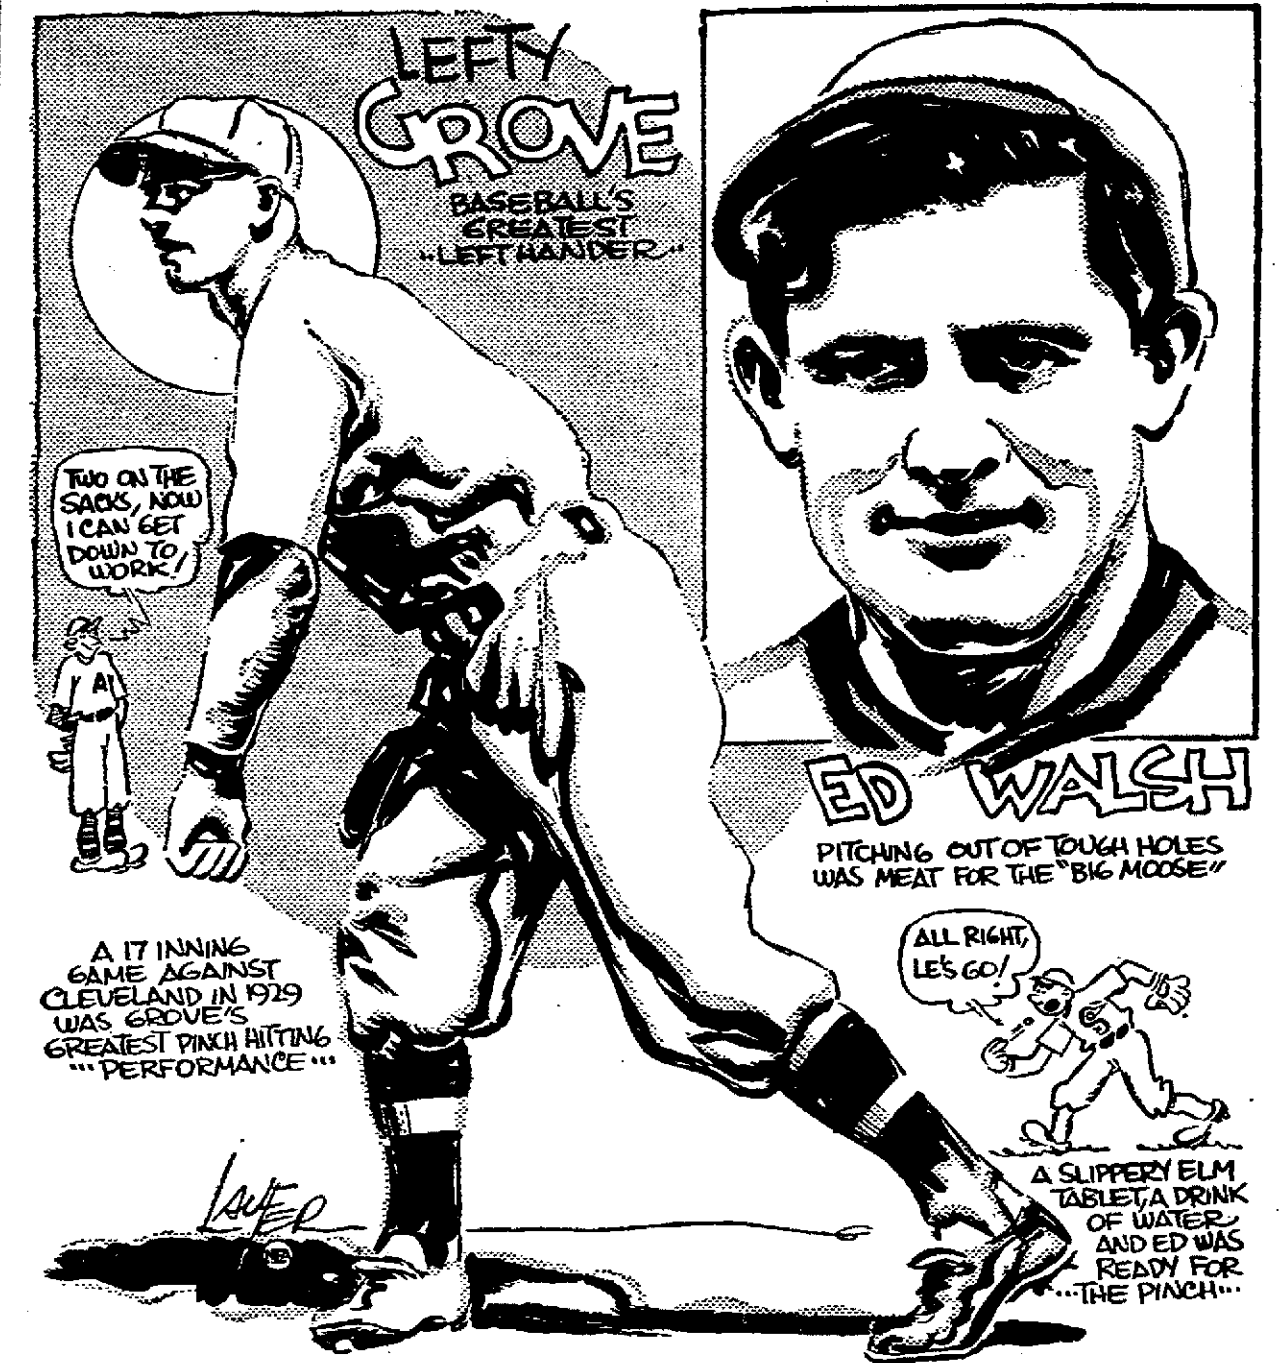

It has been whispered that a number of the world champion athletes are dissatisfied with the terms offered them. Dazzy Vance probably will be anxious to take a cut in salary and Burleigh Grimes, according to reports, will give Pittsburgh lots of trouble before he consents to toss up spitballs.

WOLVES WIN FOURTH BIG 10 CAGE FAME

Chicago (AP)—Setting up a long lead in the first half last night, Michigan won its fourth western conference basketball victory, defeating Chicago, 29 to 19.

The Wolverines ran all over the Maroons in the first half, and led 20 to 6. In the first period, however, Michigan played raggedly and was outscored by one point. Kanitz and Truskowski topped the Wolverines in scoring while Captain Changnon led the Maroons. It was Chicago's fourth straight defeat in conference competition.

Famous Pitchers Are Tough In The Pinches

BY BILLY EVANS

GREAT pitchers are usually at their best in the old pinch. They used to say of the old master, Christy Mathewson, that no pitcher was easier to hit with bases empty and none tougher with a couple of runners on and the game depending on a base hit. What held good for Matty is true of all other great pitchers—they have something in reserve for the pinch. That is what makes them great.

Ed Walsh, famous spitball pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, liked nothing better than to pitch himself out of deep holes. Over a period of perhaps 10 years, I think I am conservative in saying that I have seen Walsh do the seemingly impossible at least 50 times in substituting the position, when a base hit would have meant ruin to his team.

Langue was the starting pitcher for Chicago in a game in 1905 and for

MARQUETTE SEXTET DOWNS MICHIGAN, 3-2

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP)—Marquette's hockey players had better recuperative powers than Michigan following the hard fought game of Thursday night and Marquette won the second game of the series here Friday night, 3 to 2.

All of the Michigan points were made by men making their last appearance on the Wolverine ice. Joseph, who scored both Michigan goals in the first period, graduates in two weeks. McKenzie and C. McFadyen, the skating stars of the middle west, will not be back next year at Marquette.

All of the points were on individual performances. Joseph scored on lone excursions down the ice and McFadyen did the same. McKenzie took a pass a little distance out, and accounted for the other point.

EAST GREEN BAY CAGERS BEAT WEST, 13 AND 10

Green Bay (AP)—East Green Bay won a 13-10 victory over West, 13 to 10 in a listless basketball game Friday night. Neither team contributed to making the traditional contest a hard-fought match.

eight innings he held a one-run margin. In the ninth he passed the first three men to face him, filling the bases. It was such a cold day that Jimmy Callahan, then managing the White Sox, hesitated about asking anyone to go to the rescue. Then someone asked me to call time.

Looking toward the Chicago bench I saw Ed Walsh place a slippery elm tablet in his mouth and take a drink of water. That was Walsh's method to get up quite a flow of saliva. He started for the pitcher's box, removing his sweater. He threw five balls, then went to work. Walsh pitched just 10 balls to retire the next three batters on strikes. At seven of the pitches the hitters swung and missed, two were called strikes and one a ball. Not so much as a foul was made.

However, for the greatest concentrated exhibition of pinch pitching I have ever seen, I need only go back to the season of 1929. I was a spectator. Philadelphia and Cleveland were the opposing teams. The starting pitching selections were Miller for Cleveland and Grove for the Athletics. Rudin was the finishing pitcher for the Indians, but Grove went all the way.

Going into the eighth inning, Philadelphia was leading 3-2. Two hits and an error filled the bases with no one out. This seemed to be the turning point of the game. It was Walter Miller's turn at bat. Peck had Hudlin warm up and sent Hartley to bat for Miller. He forced Hodapp at the plate. Morgan sent a sacrifice to right, sending over the tying run. A pass to J. Sewell again filled the bases, but Averill died out.

For the next eight innings both Grove and Hudlin pitched runless ball. Grove was always in trouble, Hudlin seldom. Yet in the 17th inning, a home run broke up the ball game, Philadelphia winning, 5-3. In the 17th innings of play, Cleveland made 20 hits, Grove gave four bases on balls, also contributed the only error of the game, yet Cleveland could only make three runs and did not score after the eighth inning. A hit on eight occasions would have won the ball game, but it was never forthcoming. Joe Sewell made five hits in eight times at bat. On the three trips that he failed, runners were on the bases each time. Earl Averill had several chances to break up the game, but Grove was too much.

Cleveland had 23 men left on the base. Philadelphia had only eight runners stranded. The Athletics made 13 hits count for five runs.

Grove had terrific speed that day, yet the Indians hit him hard in spots. With men on the bases, he was invincible. I think I fell out of my seat a half dozen times that afternoon pulling for a hit that never came. It was the most remarkable exhibition of effectiveness in the pinches I have ever seen.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

AL SIMMONS thinks Wes Ferrell of Cleveland is the best pitcher in the league. Ferrell returned his contract unsigned the other day. Barney Dreyfuss once threatened to sue John J. McGraw for shouting "Hey, Barney!"...Kid Berg, who beat Tony Canzoneri the other night, is as busy as a bee in the ring...he swarms all over his man, but they say he's a right hitter...Broadway likes him...The Oklahoma Aggies have won 53 consecutive dual meets in wrestling...Prime Carners' countrymen are going to present him with something nice...two suggest they give him a manhole cover and give it to the lad for a watch charm.

L. C. MERCHANTS WIN FROM WOLVERINES

Villagers Take Early Lead and Romp to Victory Over Y. M. C. A. Team

In a game featured by good teamwork on the part of both teams, the Little Chicago Merchants barely eked out a 17-13 win over the Wolverines of the Older Boys league Friday evening.

The first half ended with the score of 10-5 in favor of the Merchants but the Wolverines cut this lead in the third quarter to 11-9. The teams played evenly for the first part of the last quarter but with about five minutes to play Gerry Versteegen sunk a long and a short shot and Peeter made a short, making the score 15-11. On a snap shot Van Dyke dropped one from the center of the floor bringing the Chute scoring to an end at 17 points. With the safe lead of 6 points the Chutes choose to play instead of stall and just before the end of the game Emerich slipped through the Chute defense and made a short shot, ending the scoring for the game.

The Appleton scores were well divided with Peeter's three points the highest. All the men played a good floor game and showed plenty of speed throughout the game. For the Chutes, Gerry Versteegen, with seven points, and Van Den Heuvel, with six points, led the attack. Van Dyke made the rest of the Chute points with two field goals besides playing a good defensive game.

CHILEAN LIGHTIE LOSES TO SINGER

Stanislaus Loayza Takes Terrific Beating from Bronx Idol

New York (AP)—One more victory had been added today to the already imposing record of Al Singer, Bronx idol, who some experts believe will be the next lightweight champion of the world.

Singer belted out an easy decision signed the other day. Barney Dreyfuss once threatened to sue John J. McGraw for shouting "Hey, Barney!"...Kid Berg, who beat Tony Canzoneri the other night, is as busy as a bee in the ring...he swarms all over his man, but they say he's a right hitter...Broadway likes him...The Oklahoma Aggies have won 53 consecutive dual meets in wrestling...Prime Carners' countrymen are going to present him with something nice...two suggest they give him a manhole cover and give it to the lad for a watch charm.

Eighteen thousand fans gave Loayza a tremendous ovation as he left the ring after an exhibition of gameness seldom equalled here before. There was no question, however, as to the decision. Singer won eight of the ten rounds. Loayza one, the tenth, and the second was even.

Singer gave the Chilean a terrific lacing and nearly knocked him out in the third and sixth rounds. In the third the Bronx youngster floored Loayza for a count of nine with a hard smash to the jaw.

KIMBERLY QUINT TAKES ONE-SIDED GAME FROM OCONTO

Club House Team Has No Trouble Winning from Invading Five

KIMBERLY—in a game featured by a nip and tuck battle during the first half when the teams battled for every point, but rather dull and one sided in the second half, Kimberly club basketball team Friday night defeated Oconto on the club house floor, 34 and 15.

The first quarter started with a bang, each team putting into play everything it had. A field goal by Rest and three free throws and a field goal by Gossens gave Kimberly a 7-4 lead at the end of the first quarter. Eight personal fouls were called during the period.

Gossens opened the second period by a short shot under the basket. On the next play Courchane made a field goal. Then O'Connor staged a comeback and O'Connor played each sank field goals. Courchane of the Club team sank a long shot just before the time was up to make the score 13-8 in Kimberly's favor at the end of the half.

Koll was substituted for Courchane, Dupont for Stevens, and Reetz went back to guard at the beginning of the second half. This combination seemed to work as good as the first and after the third quarter was over Kimberly had stretched its lead 13 points, the score being 25-12 at the end of the period.

The last quarter the Club team working like a well oiled machine, displaying the best passing offense this season and ran away with the Legion team. The work of Dupont and Stevens, the new men, was especially pleasing. Dupont played his center position like a veteran and Stevens had no trouble in taking the ball off of the bounding board. During the period O'Connor made his fourth personal but was allowed to play. Before the end of the game he had run his total to six taking all fouling honors.

The game ended with Kimberly safely in the lead with a score of 34-15.

In a preliminary game the Delta Sigma Tau fraternity team of Lawrence college took a rough and close game from the Lefty Aces, the score being 19-14.

SHUTE, ESPINOSA LEAD TEXAS OPEN

Second 18 Holes of Play for $7,500 Prize Will Be Staged Today

San Antonio, Tex. (AP)—Closely bunched after yesterday's opening round, a crack field of professional linksmen today awaited the second 18-hole test of the $7,500 Texas open tournament. Several scores who start with light hearts under yesterday's sun were cast in the rears and their spirit broken by the tricky championship course.

Pacing the sturdier lot that remained to battle for the $1,500 first prize were Densmore Shute of Columbus, Ohio, Los Angeles open champion, and Al Espinosa, Chicago veteran. By tanning their way around in 68 strokes, three under par, the pair put daylight between themselves and the remainder of the field.

Only two others faced today's round under par. They were Tony Manero and Mike Turnesa, both of Elmford, N. Y. Each did yesterday's 18-holes in 70, one under perfect golf. Mike's more famous brother, Joe, was one of those who gave up the game, complaining the initial round, and the youngster evidently was bent on upholding the family honor.

Question—Who was the football champion of the Pacific Coast Conference this year?
Answer—No championship was awarded because no team stood out with a clear claim.

Question—Has the heavyweight title always been won in the ring? That is, was the champion always defeated by his opponent?
Answer—No. When Jim Jeffries retired the title was open and Marvin Hart and Tommy fought for the right to be called champion. Jeffries was the referee and Tommy Burns was declared the winner and champion. This is the only instance on record.

Question—Two men are out. Runner is on first base and there are two strikes on the batter. The next is a ball. Runner starts to steal. Catcher in attempting to throw him out hits the bat which is above the batter's head. Umpire seizes the runner back to first and he remains there, the next pitch being the third strike. Should the batter have been called out?
Answer—No. The catcher made a wild throw and the runner was entitled to go as far as he could.

STOUT BEATS POINT

Stevens Point (AP)—Stout Institute of Menomonee defeated Central State teachers of Stevens Point in an overtime game here Friday night, 11 to 26. Hassa, Stout, guard, dropped in two long shots and sank one from the free throw line to give his team its first victory in the State Teachers' conference. The contest was a drab battle from the start.

OSHKOSH LOSES

Whitewater (AP)—A free throw by Sturtevant two minutes before the end of the last half gave Whitewater a 26 to 25 victory over Oshkosh Teachers in a hectic basketball game here Friday night.

Though behind 17 to 12 at the half, Oshkosh managed to knot the score at 25-25. Then Zimmerman ruled Sturtevant, who made one of the two shots allotted him.

Managers, Not Traveling Players, Ruin Pro Caging

SPORTS scribes who tell stories that itinerant basketball players in professional ranks are spoiling the pro game in many Wisconsin towns are all wrong in the opinion of Eddie Kotal, Appleton, who has been named or hinted as one of the boys who dash around the state picking up nickels and dimes, caring little whether they play their best or even put in their appearance.

Kotal waxed rathly a few days ago after Stony McGlynn down at Milwaukee sat down to his typewriter one afternoon and punched out a story that the traveling players were putting the crimp in the pro game.

And then George "Packey" McFarlane over at Manitowoc picked up the bone of contention and added a few more lines and of course that didn't set any better with the pros. "It isn't the players who are killing the sport by playing wherever they feel like it and whenever they feel like it," Kotal said recently, "it's the managers who bill us as being with a team when they know we aren't going to be on hand. If anyone is killing the pro sport it's the managers, the only persons who are ruining the fans."

To be more explicit Kotal pointed out that several days ago he was billed to play with a certain team over at Manitowoc and because he didn't put in his appearance, the sports scribe at Manitowoc put him on the pan. The fact was the manager of the team playing Manitowoc knew several days before hand they Kotal would be playing with a Milwaukee team that evening and not with his squad. "And," says Eddie, "they blame me for that."

Being a fairly modest chap Kotal says nothing about his abilities as compared with home town talent in pro league circles. That's where we'll come to his rescue. If Eddie's abilities are such that his services are in demand at various places, more power to him. And why our brother sports scribes should go off on a tangent and say naughty things about Eddie is another question for the naval disarmament meeting or for the investigators who drew up that famous Carnegie foundation bulletin No. 23.

CARNERA HANGS K. O. ON RHOUX IN 47 SECONDS

Illinois Commission Holds Up Purses Pending Invest- igation

BY WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO—(AP)—Primo Carnera, Italy's big brawler, today was the second holder of a $50,000 purse pending investigation of a 47-second knockout over Elmer Rhoix, French-Canadian heavy-weight—a contest which will not become official, nor will the boxers receive any money for their chore, until the Illinois state boxing commission is convinced the contest was "Genuine."

The unveiling of Primo before Chicago eyes, and the attendant ceremony, was quickly accomplished at the Chicago stadium last night. Rhoix was the first of action in the first round, Carnera knocked the French-Canadian to the floor six times, the last time leaving him there, apparently thoroughly chilled with his chin snuggled in the canvas.

While no definite charges of anything wrong were made, Frederick Gardener, a member of the athletic commission, announced the purses of both fighters would be held up pending an investigation into the matter. He said the purses and referee Dan Barry would be called upon next Tuesday, for consultation as to the genuineness of the knockdown, and that Carnera and his opponent also would be requested to answer some questions.

After referee Barry had tolled off the count of ten following the sixth knockdown, the spectators, 17,249, who left $95,625 at the Stadium ticket windows, bowed and hurled folded newspapers and programs into the ring to express their disapproval. Rhoix was guaranteed $2,000 for his share of the entertainment, while Carnera's cut amounted to about $17,000.

Rhoix sported the Italian Goliath, 6'4" and 240 pounds, and appeared to be extremely nervous as he entered the ring. Primo opened up with a left hook which knocked Rhoix. Then followed a series of smashes. Each of which was good for a knockdown. Rhoix took a bump on the head, and the next blow, a left to the back of Elmer's head sent him sprawling between Carnera's legs. Three vicious-looking rights accounted for three more bounces by Rhoix before a final fight finished him.

Rhoix did not land a punch during the brief encounter.

Both Carnera and his manager Leon Cio, were vehemently indignant at the action of commissioner Gardener.

The huge Italian stormed about his dressing room and through his interpreter, gave his version of the fight.

"I hit him first on the nose with a straight left," he said in mingled French and Italian.

"My second blow was a straight right which landed on the temple, and split my glove. The third blow was to the shoulder and the fourth struck my opponent on the chin. It was my first blow that stunned him, and he could not raise his arms except to try to defend himself."

Cio declared that the connection of Abe Attell, former featherweight champion, with Carnera's retinue, had no significance except that he was a boxing instructor. Attell's association with the party previously had been questioned.

The semi-final bout between King Tut, of Milwaukee, and Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y., Negro lightweight, went the limit and resulted in a decision for the rugged Wisconsin puncher. He knocked Flowers down twice for counts of nine in the seventh round.

The New Color Harmony In Table Setting

BY MARGERY TAYLOR
Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's
Magazine, Writer, For Post-Crescent

Color is the silent music with which the modern hostess is adding new charm to her dinners. The new notes in table setting—the colors of linen, china, glassware and flowers—the clever hostess is blending into the ensemble of the dining room. With that good taste which always seeks the right note for the right occasion, she varies the new color menu, as it were with the nature of the meal.

She has a world of color from which to choose and is limited only by her imagination—and budget. Since it is the largest color mass in the scheme, the table cloth strikes the keynote—and what possibilities it opens, when it might be in soft peach, daring powder blue, lucid green, a veritable "cantorial," silvery gray or rich dull gold.

A blue cloth—set with delicately flowered china, goblets of pink glass, silver candlesticks and pink rosebuds—wouldn't that be a prelude and an accompaniment for the noblest meal?

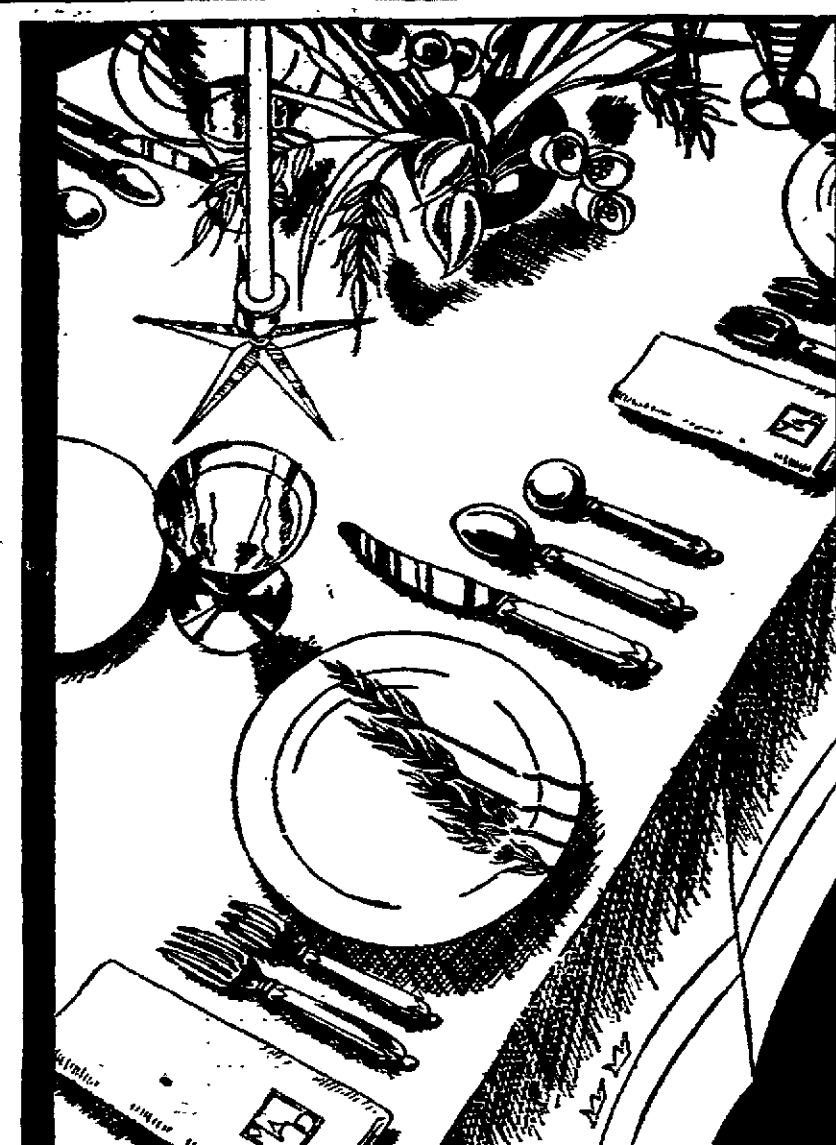

For luncheon a green checked tablecloth makes the perfect background for green glassware, yellow pottery with a deep scalloped edge, and a centerpiece of yellow callendula.

Even a white tablecloth may have its moments—set with those pattern plates with a fluted orchid ruffle, or child glassware and a centerpiece of roses repeating that color note.

Very modern and gay are red patterned plates, ruby colored glass rising from a background of grey cloth set with pewter.

Do not let your zeal for color lure you into discord or confusion. The perfect contrast is expressed in two colors, no more. With green dishes, either peach or yellow is delightful—but both, in peach linen and yellow glassware, would blur the scheme.

For very formal occasions, many color enthusiasts are still using white linen and crystal. Colors will be new for a long time—do not hesitate, fearing they are a fad. If you are planning a complete new service, it would be intriguing to forget the "set" tradition. Buy your plates, cups and saucers from a set but use silver or pewter and glassware for salad, dessert and soup courses.

A Table set the ultramodern manner.

WAS FLOUR OR FLOWERS

Albany—If it hadn't been for the barrel of flour, William McDonough would have been receiving pretty flowers which he wouldn't have been able to smell. As it was the barrel was conveniently located under his window when he tried to raise it and fell out. He fell into the barrel of flour, which undoubtedly eased the shock enough to save his life.

HAGMAN WILL NAME FAIR COMMITTEES EARLY NEXT WEEK

12 Groups Will Be Appointed to Take Charge of Affairs

Kaukauna—Committees in charge of the Mid-Winter fair on Feb. 26, 27 and 28 are being selected by W. P. Hagman, chairman. They will be announced next week. Twelve committees will be appointed.

Mr. Hagman will go to Madison next week where he will secure some speakers. Several speakers will be from the state department of agriculture. A woman speaker and demonstrator may be put on the program as a special attraction for women.

It is doubtful whether a health clinic will be held in connection with the fair this year, Mr. Hagman stated. The fair has been one of the features of past fairs and was one of the most interesting attractions. All the other attractions of the past again will be offered. It is expected that a large number of farm exhibits will be entered at the fair. As soon as the programs are completed, copies will be mailed to farmers in this vicinity.

The fair is being sponsored again by the Kaukauna Advancement association. Mr. Hagman was selected to head the fair at a meeting of the association this week. The high school, high school auditorium and municipal garage will be used for the fair.

PIGMENTS CAUSE SWINE COLORING

Excessive Trimming Necessary When Colored Spots Are Found

Excessive trimming, necessitated by the frequent occurrence of dark colored areas in bacon sides, causes Wisconsin swine growers a considerable annual loss, according to County Agent Gus Sell.

These dark colored areas, popularly termed "seed," were formerly attributed to the milk glands being in a semi-active state at the time of slaughter. Such is not the case. Investigators find "seediness" to be directly associated with the presence of certain pigments. Even barrows have been known to yield "seedy" bacon. Pure white hogs never have "seedy" sides. Some red and black hogs do, others do not, find J. S. Park and Alan Deakon, commercial fellows working under the direction of L. J. Vole, geneticist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Since white hogs unscaled readily when subjected to certain Wisconsin pasture conditions, the investigators are endeavoring to isolate "seed-free" strains of colored hogs and from them breed up more desirable pork producers.

The colored pigment which accounts for "seediness" is just as inheritable as the skin pigments that give black and red hogs their characteristic colors, claim the investigators.

Both red and black pigments cause "seed." Black "seed" is caused by a granular pigment, which is identical to the same as that which gives red and black hogs their respective colors. Contrary to expectations, red hogs usually do not have "seediness" caused by red pigment. Black "seed" is most common to red hogs.

RAILROAD ABANDONS LINE IN MICHIGAN

Washington, D. C. —(AP)—Abandonment by the Hancock and Calumet railroad of its line between Lake Junction and Oscoda, Mich., was signed in an application to the Interstate Commerce Commission today. The company said the line was useless because of construction by the Calumet and Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. of its own line to the mines.

Chicago —(AP)—Out of Chicago's money shortage has been born a new racket—the sale of city licenses at half price.

The two men who conceived this method of getting money without working for it were arrested after they tried it on a restaurant at Michigan-ave and 119th-st.

They told him they were city employees whom the city was unable to pay. "For that reason, we have permission to get our money by selling you a city cigarette license at half price."

The proposition sounded good to the restaurant keeper, who called police.

SOME NIGHTGOWNS HAVE BIG POCKETS

Chief Use of Pocket. However, Seems to Be That of Decoration

BY AILEEN LAMONT (Copyright, 1930, by Const. Press) New York —(AP)—Nightgowns seem not much use for a woman's nightgown, but they are a very important part of her wardrobe. The chief use of the pocket, however, seems to be that of decoration.

Not the least attractive of the nightgowns is the one with a pocket. It has a decorative value. The pocket is a very important part of the nightgown. The chief use of the pocket, however, seems to be that of decoration.

Chapter 25
THE WARNING

OBADIAH EVANS mounted the front steps of Phelps' Tavern with heavy, tired tread. The clerk at the desk greeted him cordially as he entered the office. "A room for the night," he said, in answer to Obadiah's question. "Certainly, Mr. Evans. Have you any luggage?" "Nary a piece," and Obadiah waved a porter back to his seat in the hall, "save this"—and he put a small black bag on the counter. "Lock it up in your safe until I get back."

"I'll return later," and before the clerk could say more, he was out of the office.

The rain had developed into a steady downpour as he hurried up the steps of the jail.

"Evening, Sheriff," Obadiah brushed by the astonished man and entered the hall, where he paused to remove his wet overcoat and hat. "Can I have a private word with you?"

"You've struck the right hour for that," announced Big Bill Beach, dryly, leading the way into the sitting room. "My folks are all in bed."

"How about placing a guard about Yew Lodge?" asked Obadiah abruptly.

"What's the need of a guard?" Beach countered. "Have sightseers ladsgered Miss Prescott?"

"Mohawk Pond's off the beaten track," Obadiah pointed out slowly. "Then Jim and me turn back any strangers we see entering the lane."

Beach stroked his chin. "Darn lonesome for the kid," he admitted, finally, "unless you've turned lady's man," and he eyed Obadiah's ungainly length of limb and rugged, weatherbeaten countenance with a covert smile.

"We're not her only neighbors," continued Obadiah, slightly ruffled. "There's Sundown."

"The half-breed Indian?" questioned Beach, speaking more quickly. "I understood he'd cleared out."

"No yet; but he's going to," grimly.

Beach hesitated. "Didn't old man Prescott give him a deed to Bird Man's Bluff, seems to me I heard of it some time last winter."

"You heard wrong," Obadiah spoke with positiveness. "Sundown may claim squatter's rights, but I won't get him far." He drew his chair closer to the sheriff. "The half-breed comes within the vagrancy law, I'm thinking."

"So?" Beach's interest quickened. "No visible means of support, right?"

"Just so. Come out, Sheriff, and tell him to move on."

"Hold hard!" exclaimed Beach, with inborn caution. "He can't get steady employment, he told me once, because of night blindness."

Obadiah puffed at his pipe for a moment or so, then held it in his hand as he bent forward.

"I was over to see Dr. Wells at East Brook Farm, beyond Torrington way," he explained. "He's the great eye doctor down to New York and in vacation time has a clinic, he calls it, at Torrington Hospital. Sundown's been to see him."

"Well, go on," urged the sheriff, his interest growing.

"I've just come from Dr. Wells' house. The doctor told me Sundown's eyes are peculiar, but as a general thing he can see 'most as well as you and me, day or night. He's just a faker and a clever one at that."

"A clever faker," repeated the sheriff. "Well, I swan to gracious!"

Obadiah hesitated; how far might he venture?

"A dangerous one I'm thinking," he said, "and living too darn close to Yew Lodge."

Beach caught his meaning instantly.

"Is the half-breed troubling Miss Prescott?" he asked. "If so I'll run him off the place; that is," with more caution, "if she can prove he's a nuisance."

The farmer pushed back his chair and rose.

"I'll prove it," his gruff tones deepened. "I have your promise, Sheriff, to act if Sundown gives Miss Prescott trouble. Remember, the girl's living there alone, with only a negro maid. Your promise, man."

"You have it," was the prompt and emphatic reply, and Beach followed his caller in to the wide entry. "Say," as Obadiah matched up his overcoat and slid into it, "Miss Prescott gave me a ring to-day."

"She did? What for?"

"Asked me to come and see her."

Sheriff Beach opened the front door as he spoke and Obadiah stepped past him.

"And said I was to be sure and bring her gun—"

"Her gun?" repeated Obadiah, with rising intonation.

"The one she used to kill Stanton," explained the sheriff.

"What did she want the gun for?"

The sheriff shrugged his shoulders. "She didn't say; a woman's whim, I guess. Maybe," with a faint chuckle, "she wants to try a pot shot at me. So long, Obadiah," and he closed the front door.

Obadiah found the office at Phelps' Tavern deserted except for the night clerk. He was about to depart with his black bag when the latter stopped him.

Obadiah was about to blot his signature when his gaze fell on the name entered above his own. He stared at it with puzzled, amazed eyes.

"Say," he hailed the clerk as the latter started to enter a room of the office, "which room has Mr. Philander Chase?"

Left to himself, Obadiah crossed over to the hall and looked about; the porter was not here, nor any belated guests of the tavern. No sound disturbed the stillness.

Still holding his black bag, Obadiah entered the telephone booth and closed the door with a quick care. He grew hot and stuffy in the narrow box, but with a quivering patience while the telephone operator struggled to find Dodo Farm.

At last he heard the sound of a receiver being removed from the hook and Jim's voice came faintly over the wires.

"Hello, Jim—Pop speaking!" Obadiah moderated his voice and enunciated his words with unusual care. "What's that you say?"

"I've got 'em both."

"Both?" echoed Obadiah, pressing the receiver to his ear and his lips to the mouthpiece. "Are you sure?" and with his free hand he wiped the moisture from his forehead.

It was Jim's turn to question as the wires carried a humming noise, drowning out Obadiah's voice.

"Philander Chase registered her at the Tavern to-night—"

Silence. Obadiah repeated the words. "I know."

Jim's voice came to him with increased volume.

"Pop, watch out!"

EMPLOYMENT HOLDS TO IMPROVEMENT, GOVERNMENT FINDS

Situation Is Steadily Becoming Better, General Survey Reveals

BY J. C. BOYLE
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Washington—(AP)—Government officials stand squarely behind the declarations that employment is increasing and that construction is proceeding at a satisfactory pace. That is bringing relief to many anxious businessmen who have been watching for the concrete results from tentative programs. Reports to President Hoover indicate that the last available figures of the department of labor showed a gain of 3.3 per cent in employment over the first part of this month. Only three or four lines of industry failed to show a gain.

The department of commerce announces that building contracts are being let at the rate of approximately $15,000,000 a day. This compares with approximately $12,500,000 a business day for December, although the latter usually is a better month in this respect than January.

Chain stores are reporting a splendid volume of business. So are mail order houses. Reports cannot be so readily compiled with respect to the department stores and specialty shops, but there is every reason to believe their volume of business has shown improvement since Jan. 1. The weather has not been favorable and winter resort outfitting trade has been slow. There is a trend toward the purchase of slightly higher priced merchandise, but this is tentative as yet.

EQUIPMENT MAKERS HAPPY
Electrical equipment manufacturers are not slowing down. With the orders on their books for central station equipment, railway electrification, shipping and airplane equipment, telephone and telegraph equipment, radio refrigeration, electric welding and household utensils, there is no reason why they should. The same is true to a slightly lesser extent in the case of agricultural equipment producers. Rumors or mergers in this field will not do.

The cotton textile group have reduced production, but it remains to be seen whether or not they have done so judiciously. Lincoln Baylies, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, says that in some cases textile concerns are not making plant operation and merchandizing dovetail. He also urges incessant efforts toward the creation of new fabrics or new variation of existing fabrics. One move toward solving his program was made this week by the merging of the American Chatham Corp., operating large rayon mills at Rock, Ga., with the Tubize Artificial Silk company and the return of Chatham Mills to full capacity operation.

STEEL PACE RISING
The steel mill operations are still creeping slowly upward. The demand for gas pipe has bolstered the pipe mill operations and new electric welding devices are helping the output of tubular plants.

The automobile business has got off to a fine start. Not as many cars have been produced this month as a year ago, but the industry might have been produced this month, as a many had been produced in 1928. Richard H. Scott, president of the Reo company, says that production is being closely geared now to retail demand and that this is a thoroughly healthy condition.

Copper is still maintaining its ground, but the copper market at the moment is a buyers' market rather than a sellers' market since supplies are ample. Demand from abroad might reverse this trend sharply. Lead and zinc are in a better statistical position than a month ago.

PEOTTER'S GARAGE
FEATURES 24 HOUR DAY TOW SERVICE
New Wrecking Truck Is Capable of Towing Any Size Car, Truck

A 24-hour day tow service is one of the features of the Peotter garage at 621 W. College Ave. Many motorists during the past few weeks, stalled by heavy snow, or excessive cold weather, availed themselves of this service and have found it dependable, courteous and up to the minute.

One of the features of Peotter service, which is especially pleasing to the motorist is that he can have his car towed to any garage he chooses. Mr. Peotter is cooperating with other garages and has handled many of their towing jobs.

A complete automobile repair service also is featured at the Peotter garage. Mechanics' equipment of the latest types has been installed to handle most any kind of repair job in record time. Only expert mechanics are employed, and when your car leaves the garage you can rest assured that your machine has been given the proper amount of attention.

Motorists are repaired, chassis are rebuilt or repaired, wheels are straightened, axles put back into shape, fenders, running boards and other parts of the body are renovated and repaired. Special equipment has been installed to handle each part of this work separately.

GAMBLE STORES PLAN BIG EXPANSION PROGRAM

Gamble Stores are in full accord with the campaign of President Hoover to stabilize business conditions of the country and keep it on its present sound basis by forging ahead with all public works and industrial expansion.

Plans are already under way for the largest expansion program in their history. One hundred stores will be added in new towns during the first six months of 1930, making a total of two hundred stores by July 1st, requiring a capital outlay of approximately $1,000,000.00 and an addition to the sales force of from two hundred to three hundred men.

A heavy advertising campaign has been planned for 1930. Orders have been placed for four million catalogs for distribution covering the trade territory. Road signs, radio, and other advertising has been planned for, and the appropriate newspaper advertising has been doubled.

They have found that best results are obtained by a strong program of newspaper advertising carried throughout the year—and covering their entire territory by use of local papers.

GERMANS PRESS EUROPEAN UNION AS BAR TO WAR

Opinion Seems to Be That Continental Nations Need Closer Fusion

BY O. PAUL JACOB
Berlin—(AP)—Opinions are divided in Germany as to the feasibility of creating a pan-European, but agreement prevails in many political and industrial circles that some kind of a closer fusion of the continental nations has become imperative.

The realization has been spreading that Europe is on the verge of becoming another Balkan hotbed, with nations armed to the teeth confronting each other and in constant danger of starting another war conflagration through some error or misunderstanding.

Even those not advocating the pan-European idea admit that it would at least eliminate the menace of Germany's being swamped by more powerful neighbors. As Erich Koch, the Reichstag deputy from Weser and a close friend of the late Dr. Stresemann writes, Germany's geographical position is the most unfavorable imaginable for war. But in a definitely peaceful Europe, that same location would make her the most favored country, providing her foreign representatives are clever enough to nip any attempt at a fusion under the political and economic influence of some other power.

As the method of Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, for the consummation of the Pan-European idea is considered by many too complicated, political and industrial leaders of Germany are more inclined to favor a central European fusion, such as was advocated before the war by the former undersecretary of state, Friedrich Naumann.

They have revived Naumann's argument that Germany's future lies in a central European alliance to be extended towards the southeast by the successive adherence of countries in which the German language, German traditions and German sciences continue to be popular.

In this connection, Deputy Koch and others in his persuasion would see the nation take a greater interest in that Jewish element somewhat scornfully designated in Germany as "Ostjuden" (Jews of Eastern Europe) who, they say, have fulfilled a great German mission in countries where they sought refuge in the Middle Ages from German persecution. They acted as promulgators of the German language. It is argued, for their yiddish German is a modern adaptation of the old high German.

"England which has the faculty of turning every opportunity to its advantage," writes Herr Koch, "would have known better how to treat these Jews than we did during our occupation of Poland."

COIFFURE QUESTION APPROACHING CRISIS

Paris—(AP)—Spring millinery models give warning that French designers are tired of waiting for women to make their minds up as to whether they want long or short hair.

There are fewer fashions in the spring collections for women who are in the throes of letting their bobbed hair grow.

Protective long back brims, which make winter models a god-send for the many in the betwixt and between stage, are considerably shortened in the spring straw models.

Milliners presuppose that their clients have by this time either grown their bobbed hair past the shaggy stage, when the necking has to be hidden, or that they have definitely decided to leave it short.

The majority of smartly coiffured European women still wear short hair, although not as short as they did a few months ago. Additional length is taken up in soft waves and ringlets at the back.

GREAT FUTURE FOR INSURANCE SEEN BY BUSINESS EXPERT

Public Is Cured of Speculative Mania, Babson Believes

Babson Park, Fla. — In the cataclysm of last October and November four great pillars of financial security stood stalwart and unshaken in the midst of the chaos. These were high grade bonds and first mortgages, savings deposits, building and loan shares, and life insurance. They proved a strong reliance in time of trouble. In sharp contrast to crumbling values in speculative securities, their values remained constant. That is because they are true investments, entirely aloof from speculation. Surely a lesson has been taught which the public will not soon forget.

Many a man was saved from ruin by savings built up through insurance. The great life insurance companies reported the heaviest demand for policy loans in their history. That they were able to supply these loans all of one time and still come through with unimpaired resources testifies to their tremendous financial strength and conservative management. I do not recommend borrowing of life insurance policies. A man who borrows on his policy is borrowing from his widow and children, and if it is his only policy he is doing a very foolish thing. It is, however, good to know that, in time of dire emergency, there is a backlog of resources which can be relied upon.

I believe that instead of hurting life insurance, the stock market smash will temporarily greatly benefit it. Temporarily, of course, reduced purchasing power may make it somewhat harder to sell new policies, but there is the tremendous offsetting constructive advantage that people will now turn instinctively to those underlying forms of investment and protection which have stood the test of fire.

The manner in which life insurance sales have moved since the stock market smash is strong testimony supporting this view. In November 1929, 6 per cent more ordinary life insurance was written than in the same month in 1928, and in December, 4 per cent more was written. It is estimated that 1929, as a whole, witnessed the writing of $19,300,000,000 of new policies, or about $1,100,000,000 greater than in the preceding year.

GREAT PROGRESS FACTOR

I look to see vast further expansion in the insurance business over future years, not only because insurance is a great boon to individuals, but because it has become a vital factor in financing industry and national progress. It represents tremendous accumulations of capital. Assets of life insurance companies in this country total more than $17,000,000,000. Our railroad system, great industries, and public utilities are financed largely by insurance companies. During the war they were the greatest buyers of Liberty Bonds and are now probably among the largest holders of our national debt. The development of agriculture has been largely financed by insurance companies, through farm mortgages. The first office building, nearly every large office building, hotel, and apartment house is held by some insurance company, while now more progressive companies are making special arrangements for the loaning of money for the building of small homes. This means that when paying money into an insurance policy, we not only protect our family and make a fair investment with a high degree of security, but we also render a good service in helping to build up the country—agriculture, railroads, cities, public utilities, and industry in general. Some of the companies make it a practice to loan back to the people of each state a sum approximating the premiums received from that state.

Of course, a large amount of the financing of national progress is being done by banks, investment dealers, and other interests, but without the educational work and systematic collection of small sums by the insurance companies the United States would not be anywhere near her present stage of economic development.

Investments of life insurance companies represent the most stable form of securities. About 42 per cent of their assets are invested in real estate, first mortgage loans, about 8 per cent in government, state and municipal bonds; about 15 per cent in railroad bonds; about 9 per cent in public utility bonds; and the remainder is invested in other secure ways, such as policy loans, real estate, some industrial corporation bonds, and in some states a minimum allotment of the best stocks. A stock market smash, as it is called, has no effect on the life insurance laws, as it allows the companies to invest a larger proportion of reserve in common stocks, but this movement has since been dropped. Leaders in the business are content to go on in the same conservative way of investment that has proved so satisfactory in the past.

WORK TO REDUCE COSTS

Remarkable as the insurance progress of America has been, I am convinced that the business will experience a much faster rate of growth if it can find additional ways to reduce costs and increase efficiency. For instance, there is no need for the high turnover of agents in the insurance business. It is estimated that this turnover runs as large as 30 per cent. The ordinary sales force of an industrial corporation have no such turnover.

It would not be tolerated by the management of the business if an unnecessary item of cost which is of no value, passed along to the public in the price they pay for insurance protection.

LIBERTY IS CAUSE OF TURKISH ILLS

Istanbul, Turkey—(AP)—Dr. Mehmed Osman Bey, Turkey's chief expert on mental diseases, maintains that the brusque transition of Turkish women from the sheltered life of the old regime to the heady liberties of the new day, has unbalanced the minds of at least half the city women of the republic.

Neurasthenia, melancholia and outright insanity, he says, have attacked the feminine population, which has been unable to adjust itself normally to the changed methods of living.

His opinion came out in a discussion aroused by another alienist who said that insanity was running amok in Turkish city streets. He pointed out that in Istanbul every asylum was filled. He said that 10,000 people in the place should be under restraint.

MANY CONDITIONS AFFECT PRICE OF PREFERRED STOCKS

They Include Call Price, Dividends, and Voting Power

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
New York—The technical conditions that affect the market of preferred stocks are numerous. They include the call price, if any, the question whether the dividends are cumulative or non-cumulative, whether or not the stock has voting power and whether or not it is preferred over the common as to assets as well as dividends.

If a stock is callable its possibilities of advance in market price above the call figure are limited. Some stocks do sell higher than the price at which they may be redeemed but they are exceptions and generally they are high grade investments. The purchaser of such stocks takes the risk that he will lose a part of his principal if the issue is retired. In times of easy money and falling commodity prices such as obtain now investors want securities which they may hold over a long period because it is such that appreciate in price and for that reason they give the preference to non-callable issues.

Theoretically a cumulative stock is worth more than a non-cumulative one but when dividends are covered by a wide margin little attention is paid to that provision. It is only when there is some doubt about earnings being sufficient for disbursements that the matter of cumulative status becomes important.

Ordinarily purchasers pay no attention to the voting position of a preferred stock but there are times when there is some contest for control of the corporation or some dispute about a matter of policy that gives a voting preferred issue a value aside from its investment merit. Such a situation arose some years ago in American Light & Traction when the preferred stock was in demand because it had voting power. If a corporation is prosperous it is no advantage to have the senior shares preferred over the common as to assets. If it is the first disadvantage. If preferred and common share and share alike as to assets any special distribution of property must go to the stockholders of both classes.

The agency system needs a thorough overhauling. Better personnel work would result in selecting agents who intend to make insurance their life work, and who will not be continually jumping from one company to another. Furthermore, excessive competition between companies for successful agents is a factor to be deplored. The low insurance companies can reduce their overhead costs and pass along the savings to the policyholders through lower premium rates, the faster the business will grow.

INSURANCE FIRST STEP

When laying out a program for building up an estate, everyone should give his first consideration to insurance. It is the first, essential step toward financial independence. When I was a boy, the only life insurance sold was the whole life policy, payable in cash at death; but soon came the Pure Endowment policy and now we have limited payment policies, single premium policies, combined life and endowment policies, joint family policies, educational fund policies, business insurance policies, group insurance policies, modified life and term policies, monthly income policies, policies with accidental death and disability benefits, intermediate policies, and also policies to take care of mortgages on homes, etc. All of this means that the placing of insurance is now becoming a profession and the prospective policyholder should go to an experienced and honest man who will analyze his needs.

Of course, insurance is primarily for protection. It should be combined with other forms of investment. No business man will place all his earnings into life insurance. Even life insurance men, like the rest of us, diversify their earnings into real estate, bonds, and other securities. On the other hand, they can honestly say that life insurance is something every one should carry for one reason or many reasons. From the investment standpoint it is especially advisable as a means of forced payment for those who lack the will-power to save regularly, or those who have families that are free spenders. For such, life insurance is probably one of the best investments. Certainly no investment program should be attempted before a man has secured an adequate backlog of insurance protection.

Business by the Babson school now stands at 8 per cent below normal compared with 7 per cent above normal at this time last year.

FRANCE WOULD PUT FLAG ON SEVEN SEAS

France, Sixth Power on Sea, Seeks to Regain Her Place of Third

Paris—(AP)—France wants her place on the seas. She wants a merchant fleet, flying her flag in every port.

To do this a new Ministry of Merchant Marine has been created in the Tardieu cabinet and all the odds and ends of functions pertaining to shipping have been fished out of corners in a half dozen other ministries by the new cabinet officer, Louis Rollin.

Half a century ago France was the third most important power on the sea. Today she is sixth. Germany, with almost no boats after the war, has passed France in 10 years. Italy has crowded her out of fifth place.

Gathering all the ports, lighthouses, technical shipping commissions and other like work under his authority, Rollin has set out to organize and modernize the ships and shipping of France, which amounts to only five per cent of the 67,000,000 tons afloat.

Recently, parliament authorized the government to regulate the sale of French vessels to foreigners as a means of keeping what ships there are until organization makes it profitable for a ship to fly the French flag.

In trade between French and other countries, less than a fifth of the merchandise has been carried by French boats.

It is believed that a person might live for three or four months without eating anything provided he were given water and did not exercise himself.

COMPOSERS PROTEST NEW COPYRIGHT BILL

London—(AP)—A protest against the Musical Copyright Bill pending in the House of Commons, which they say will "deprive the composer of his last remaining effective source of income his performing rights," has been made by prominent British composers.

The statement which is signed by Frederick Austin, composer of the new version of the Beggar's Opera; Captain Harry Graham, who wrote the Maid of the Mountains, and H. Fraser Simson, another well-known composer, says that composers have been hard hit by the gramophone and radio broadcasting.

"It is proposed in this bill," says the statement, "that by paying the ridiculous sum of twopence to cover the performing rights (of which sum the publishers would naturally take a share) the purchaser of a piece of copyright music would be at liberty to perform that music in public, and apparently as often as he pleased, while it was in his possession."

"Are Shaw, Barrie, Galsworthy and the rest of the playwrights whose work is issued in printed form, to be required to deliver the right of public performance of their plays to any chance purchaser, on similar terms?"

For the first six months in 1929 the total sales of electricity for lighting, cooking and domestic appliances in the 14,400,000 electrified homes in the United States were 4,891,000,000 kilowatt hours.
